

Covid-19 Con Job

Satanic Plan-Demic/Scam-Demic

Part 2

In my article “Death by Injection: The Moderna Kill Shot!” I quoted from a medical text book on virology the following information needed to confirm or validate a virus exists:

To prove the existence of a virus you need to do three things. First, culture cells and find a particle you think might be a virus. Obviously, at the very least, that particle should look like a virus. Second, you have to devise a method to get that particle on its own so you can take it to pieces and analyze precisely what makes it up. Then you need to prove the particle can make faithful copies of itself. In other words, that it can replicate.

Dr. Anthony Fauci is a Jesuit, was the very first CEO of Moderna, the company of choice the U.S. government issued a $1.5 or $1.6 billion dollar to produce a vaccine, which cannot exist based upon the above statement. As noted in part 1 of this series, Dr. Fauci and his cohorts have been misleading the world that the Corona virus was a life-threatening virus. Moderna and other pharmaceuticals stand to make billions of dollars from the public taxpayers on a fake vaccine which is not possible according to the above three requirements to qualify a pathogen as a virus. They have, through Bill Gates, managed to indemnify the vaccine companies from legal suits for damages incurred by those taking the “injection”. The U.S. taxpayers have had to pay out damages to the tune of just over $5-billion dollars to those who suffered harm and physical damages through a special fund established for this specific liability issue.

The reader needs to understand that Covid-19 is a ruse, a distraction, a diversion to take the public eye of the bigger issue at state. The premise of this article is based on the notion that COVID-19 was developed and released upon the world at this point of time, on purpose with specifically designed intentions which was to usher in one economic era and introduce another that is totally controlled by satanic globalists.

I am referring to the “Great Reset” that was established at the 2019 Davos conclave that occurred in Switzerland last year. In arriving at the truth behind the release of COVID-19, we need to first realize who is behind this? The obvious answer is the global elite. Who are the global elite? They are the simultaneous robber barons and captains of industry. This unholy, satanic-serving group has made no secret of the fact that they desire a one-world-government and a one-world-economy. These are the two sides of the coin we call The New World Order (NWO). The intention of the NWO is establish a fascist-Marxist corporate oligarchy which will serve as the executive means of control.

The proof for this statement is omnipresent and the prima fascia evidence resides in the nature and intent of the former trade agreement, The Transpacific Partnership. This agreement promised to bring a corporate panel of less than two dozen appointed oligarchs that would be able to erase the sovereignty of all government and establish itself as a corporate dictatorship. Fortunately for America and the Bill of Rights, President Trump erased the TPP from our future and Republic, minus the negative deep state influences, continued. However, this is proving to be a short-lived victory.

The intent to expose to develop this corporate oligarchy was actually exposed to the public in 1975 in the original production of the movie, Rollerball, starring James Caan. In the movie, a world devoid of personal liberties and absolute human programming was run by just six corporations. The depiction of this world in the movie speaks to a bleak future. Why was COVID-19 ushered in now?

Trump Is the Greatest Threat to Globalist Rule

Zbigniew Brzezinski, in his 1970 book entitled, 'Between Two Ages: The Technotronic Era', argued that the world was about read to undergo a significant shift economically and then politically. Brzezinski, the cofounder of the Trilateral Commission, along with David Rockefeller, predicted, or should I say planned, economic and political chaos. First, Brzezinski stated that material wealth would flow from Northern Hemisphere industrialized nations to primarily Southern Hemisphere nations. The primary method in which this would take place would be through the exportation of multi-national corporations to places like the Pacific Rim for the benefits of cheap labor. NAFTA, CAFTA and how the average American got the shaft as this became part and parcel to the globalization of the world's economy. However, the globalists were not done.

When Zbigniew Brzezinski's in his book entitled, 'Between Two Ages: The Technotronic Era', came out in 1970, a pastor friend of mine suggested that I obtain a copy. We were watching the economic engine of the U.S. being exported to every third world county for cheap labor and maximum profits to the corporatocracy. I lived in the Mon-Valley of western PA, and day in day out, flatbed trailers hauled away the many steel-making facilities in and around the Valley, piece by piece. It was a truck-driver's heaven, loads of heavy machinery leaving for trans-shipment onto barges on the Monongahela and Ohio Rivers, only to be later loaded at ocean piers in New Orleans for shipment to Mexico, China, and other destinations. Flatbed trailers that once hauled out coil steel rolls, heavy slabs that went to finishing mills around the region, were now hauling out the giant stamping presses, forges, rolls used in the finishing of ten-ton slabs, etc. The dismantling of heavy industry was piece by piece, label with instructions for re-assembly in China. When I was discharged from the Army in 1960, I worked at three different U.S. Steel plants, all closed during my period of employment with U.S. Steel.

When I read Brzezinski's book, it was obvious that the globalists were determined to reduce the American economy to a service-economy. The United States Steel Corp. facility at Homestead, PA was unequalled in the world for the diversity of its product. Its plates went into the production of the largest battleships of World War II. The names of the Iowa-class battleships: the Iowa, Missouri, New Jersey, and the Wisconsin, were built with USS Homestead Works steel plate. The driving force since the early 1950s was securing cheaper labor around the world.

While the globalists were exporting our jobs and lowering our standard of living, the so-called elite had a second wave plan. They wanted to usurp power from sovereign nations and replace it with corporate power. And while they were at it, they wanted to usher in a digital currency where they track every conceivable transaction as they will eventually outlaw bartering. This concept is being beta tested in New Zealand at this time. It's coming here. The Chinese Social Credit System is here as punishment and the loss of employment is handed out for incorrect nationalistic views as opposed to the political correct globalist-inspired movement.

Donald J. Trump was tagged as "God's Prosecutor". Trump wrestled away the mantle of power from the corporate oligarchy to constitutionally-based government. Jobs came home and Trump reversed America's economic fortune faster than other President in American history. This is why the establishment America's corporate oligarchy, the mainstream media and the bankers have all conspired against Trump and the continuing liberties of the America people.

The NWO resembles feudalism than any form of capitalism and civil liberties. Americans have had their corporations wiped out! America's civil liberties are being erased as I write these words. There is no pandemic exception to the Constitution until there is, and now, there is. Your rights are dead on arrival. Your financial options are very limited and half the people who are eligible to work in America are not employed.

The Fourth Industrial Revolution

Covid-19 was ushered in to end the present industrialization period and usher in a period of strife, poverty, a failed economy and ultimately the governing structure of the United States. This is not a conspiracy theory, this has already happened. Our country's economy lies in ruins and America is at war with herself.

Although there is no end in sight for the present situation, America is right where it needs to be at this moment in time according to the elite rulers such as Bill Gates et al. Our industrial period is over. There is no turning back. We are being moved into a total digital environment and leaving the Industrial Period behind. We are being moved into the 4th Industrial Revolution being ushered in by the World Economic Forum. In his book Brzezinski stated that when a generation goes through societal change, that particular population goes through literal hell for a generation or longer. If you need a further illustration, please refer back to America's industrial revolution and all the discord, the tenement slums, the worker mistreatment and the low standard of living as typified the early days of American industrialization.

COVID-19 has destroyed our economy and you have no civil liberties left in this country. This is the new normal where we are awaiting the full implementation of the 4th Industrial Revolution and we are going to go through hell.

Which COVID-19 vaccines will be derived from aborted children's cell lines?

There are now more than 120 COVID-19 vaccine candidates in development. Navigating the ethics of using them will be a challenge.

This past June, the Population Research Institute wrote — The race is on to find a vaccine for COVID-19. The good news is that many of the world's largest vaccine companies are developing promising vaccine candidates using ethically-derived cells. The bad news is that many of the leading vaccine candidates for the 2019 novel coronavirus (SARS-CoV2) are being developed using fetal cell lines that were originally derived from the tissues of aborted babies in the 1970s and 80s.

With more than 6.2 million reported cases so far and more than 375,000 deaths worldwide, the burden of disease from the 2019 novel coronavirus continues to mount. And so does the urgency to find a cure. From big pharma to small biotech companies and universities, researchers have been pushing out dozens of vaccine candidates and have fast-tracked promising vaccine candidates to clinical trials in record time. Pharmaceutical companies are sprinting to have a vaccine ready by the end of the year or by early 2021. All of this is a ruse to deceive the public that an actual virus exists.

According to a tracker from the World Health Organization, there are now more than 120 vaccine candidates in development. Of these, 10 vaccine candidates have already advanced to clinical trials to test the vaccine candidate's safety and efficacy. Several more candidates are expected to begin clinical trials before the end of the year.

Fetal Stem Cells Being Used

Several COVID-19 vaccine frontrunners, including those being developed by Moderna, Oxford University/AstraZeneca, CanSino Biologics/Beijing Institute of Biotechnology, and Inovio Pharmaceuticals, are using a human fetal kidney cell line called HEK-293 to develop their trial vaccines. HEK-293 was originally derived from kidney tissue taken from a baby girl who was aborted in the Netherlands in 1972 and later developed into a cell line in a lab in 1973.

Additionally, Janssen, the pharmaceutical division of consumer product giant Johnson & Johnson, is using the human fetal cell line PER.C6 to develop its vaccine. The PER.C6 fetal cell line was derived from retinal tissue taken from an 18-week-old baby boy who was aborted in the Netherlands in 1985 and later converted into a fetal cell line in 1995.

The U.S. government has made grants totaling nearly $2 billion in support of the development of COVID-19 vaccines using fetal cell lines. Most of this funding has been awarded through the Biomedical Advanced Research and Development Authority (BARDA), a division within the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS).

BARDA has awarded a $1.2 billion grant for AstraZeneca to fund research for the trial vaccine it is jointly developing with Oxford University. BARDA has also made grants for up to $483 million for Moderna's vaccine and $456 million for Janssen Research and Development, LLC of Johnson & Johnson. Inovio has also received an unspecified grant for developing its vaccine candidate from the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) at the Department of Defense.

On June 1st, BARDA issued a $628 million task order under a preexisting government contract with Emergent BioSolutions Inc. to accelerate development and manufacturing capacity for COVID-19 vaccines and drug treatments. Emergent BioSolutions is currently working with Janssen of Johnson & Johnson to manufacture their trial vaccines. BARDA's funding for Emergent, however, was not awarded specifically for scaling up production of J&J's vaccine candidate.

Worse still, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) has been producing samples of the SARS-CoV2 virus for biotech and pharmaceutical companies to use for vaccine research using fetal HEK-293T cells (a decedent cell line of HEK-293).

Moderna is also receiving substantial research assistance for its COVID-19 vaccine from the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) which helped develop the vaccine and conduct clinical trials. NIAID is a division of the National Institutes of Health (NIH) led by Dr. Anthony Fauci.

Ethically Produced COVID-19 Vaccines in the Pipeline

While many COVID-19 vaccines are being developed with fetal cell lines, a number of promising vaccine candidates, such as those being developed by Novavax, Sanofi Pasteur, GlaxoSmithKline (GSK), and Sinovac, are using ethically derived cell lines.

Of particular note, rival pharmaceutical giants Sanofi Pasteur and GSK have teamed up in an unprecedented partnership to jointly develop a vaccine for SARS-CoV2. Sanofi Pasteur will be bringing to the table an ethically produced antigen for the vaccine and GSK will be contributing an adjuvant — an immune response booster that improves the effectiveness of a vaccine.

U.K.-based GSK and France-based Sanofi are the world's #1 and #3 largest vaccine producers respectively by total revenue in 2017 according to FiercePharma.

A vaccine being developed by Maryland-based Novavax is using an ethically derived invertebrate cell line Sf9 to produce protein nanoparticle antigens that make its vaccine work.

In animal studies, Novavax's candidate demonstrated that the vaccine produces antibodies to the SARS-CoV2 spike protein and produces neutralizing antibodies capable of isolating and destroying the SARS-CoV2 virus. Novavax's vaccine has already been approved for a fast-tracked phase I/II stage clinical trial. Results for the vaccine candidate's safety profile and immunogenicity (the ability to induce an effective immune response in the body) are expected by July.

Sinovac, a China-based biotech company, is also working on an ethically derived vaccine candidate called PiCoVacc. PiCoVacc uses a purified inactivated SARS-CoV2 as an antigen. Sinovac's antigen is ethically grown in Vero (monkey kidney) cells. Sinovac's vaccine is currently undergoing expedited phase I/II clinical trials.

Pharmaceutical giant Merck also recently jumped into the COVID-19 vaccine race with an announcement on May 26th that the company will be pursuing 3 vaccine candidates. Merck was the first company to develop a proven vaccine for Ebola. Merck's Ebola vaccine was granted regulatory approval by the FDA last December.

As of the writing of this article, it is still too early to tell whether Merck's COVID-19 vaccines will use fetal cell lines or ethically derived cells.

But one of Merck's vaccine candidates for COVID-19 being developed in partnership with the International AIDS Vaccine Initiative (IAVI) will be utilizing the same platform Merck used in successfully developing its Ebola vaccine (V290). The company's Ebola vaccine is manufactured using a cell line ethically derived from the kidney cells of an African green monkey.

Another vaccine candidate being developed by Merck through Themis, a biotech company recently acquired by Merck, is seeking to use the live measles vaccine as a viral vector. Merck's measles vaccine is produced using chicken egg [Note: Merck's MMR vaccine (measles-mumps-rubella) is manufactured using human fetal cell line WI-38 which was derived from the lung cells of an aborted baby].

How Do Vaccines Work?

Cell lines are often used in vaccine production to grow viral proteins that make the vaccine work.

Vaccines produce immunity by training immune cells to fight off infection by exposing them to weakened or dead viruses or an isolated protein from the virus (or a synthetic look-alike). Providing immune cells the chance to fight off weakened viruses or viral fragments prepares the body to identify and neutralize the virus if encountered in the future.

Weakened viruses, inactivated viruses, and viral proteins used in a vaccine to produce immunity are called antigens. Antigens are any protein or molecule that triggers an immune response in the body, causing immune cells to produce antibodies. Antibodies are proteins the body's immune cells produce to bind with and tag viruses and harmful bacteria with markers that help the immune system identify and destroy pathogens.

Traditionally, vaccines are manufactured by growing antigens in animal, plant, or fungi cells or tissues such as embryonated chicken eggs, yeast, or monkey kidney cells. After the antigens have been grown in these cells, the antigens are harvested, purified, and then added to a solution that is later injected or ingested as a vaccine.

Sometimes, however, vaccine manufacturers will use human fetal cells instead of animal cells to grow the antigens for their vaccines.

Several COVID-19 vaccines under development, such as those being developed by Oxford University, CanSino Biologics, and Johnson & Johnson, are utilizing a technology known as "non-replicating viral vector" vaccines.

Unlike traditional vaccines which involve injecting antigens into the body that were previously grown in chicken eggs or Petri dishes, viral vector vaccines grow the antigens in a person's own cells.

In viral vector vaccines, a segment of DNA from the SARS-CoV2 virus is spliced into the genome of a benign carrier virus. The viral vector is also genetically modified to prevent the virus from replicating. When injected into the body, the viral vectors carry coronavirus DNA to the body's cells that provide the cells with instructions on how to make antigens.

In order to make these vaccines, vaccine manufacturers must grow a sufficient number of these genetically modified viral vectors to induce immunity. Viral vector vaccines being developed by Oxford University, CanSino Biologics, and Johnson & Johnson are currently using fetal cell lines from aborted babies to grow their viral vectors.

A number of COVID-19 vaccine candidates under development are utilizing completely new vaccine platforms that require no cells at all. Several biotech and pharmaceutical companies are racing to develop vaccines that contain no viral proteins at all but only messenger RNA (mRNA) or DNA plasmids that provide the body's cells with instructions on how to produce antigens.

Although no mRNA or DNA plasmid vaccine has yet received regulatory approval for normal use, the technology is promising. Experimental mRNA vaccines in recent years have shown promising results in clinical trials and in animal studies. mRNA vaccines could have distinct advantages over traditional vaccines because they can be developed much faster, cheaper, with a higher potency, and they can even be created without samples of the pathogen. The genome sequence is all that is needed to create these vaccines, slashing the amount of time it takes to produce a vaccine.

Additionally, mRNA- and DNA-based vaccines have the benefit that no fetal cells (or any cells for that matter) are needed to produce them.

Moderna is developing an mRNA COVID-19 vaccine candidate (mRNA-1273) in collaboration with NIAID. Meanwhile, Inovio Pharmaceuticals is developing a DNA plasmid vaccine for SARS-CoV2 (INO-4800).

Despite the fact that no fetal cell lines are needed to produce DNA plasmid vaccines, Inovio has chosen to test the immunogenicity and efficacy of its vaccine candidate using human fetal kidney cells (HEK-293T), sadly tainting what could otherwise have been a promising vaccine candidate.

As for Moderna's vaccine, NIAID claims to have helped Moderna develop mRNA-1273. In February, NIAID scientists working in collaboration with researchers at the University of Texas at Austin (UT) successfully identified and isolated the SARS-CoV2 spike (S) protein and its receptor binding domain using previous research it had on similar coronaviruses such as those which cause severe acute respiratory syndrome (SARS) and Middle East respiratory syndrome (MERS). However, the scientists in this study used human fetal kidney cells (HEK-293) to culture the SARS-CoV2 virus before isolating the S protein. The results from this study were later published in the peer-reviewed journal Science.

In a news release on February 19th, NIAID claimed that the study "supports NIAID's approach to a gene-based vaccine for COVID-19." In the same new release, NIAID also mentioned that it was working with Moderna to produce an mRNA vaccine, presumably using the findings from its study using HEK-293 cells to help identify the genetic sequence for mRNA vaccine.

Moral and Ethical Issues with Using Fetal Cell Lines to Develop Vaccines

The use of fetal cell lines for vaccine production has long stirred significant controversy among ethicists and people of faith, particularly among Catholics and Protestants that have deep religious and moral objections against the use of cell lines that were originally derived from aborted babies.

The Catholic Church has long vocally opposed the development of vaccines using unethically derived fetal cell lines. The Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith's 2008 Instruction Dignitas Personae states that the use of fetal cell lines for developing vaccines "gives rise to various ethical problems with regard to cooperation in evil and with regard to scandal" and that "everyone has the duty to make known their disagreement and to ask that their healthcare system make other types of vaccines available."

Although it is not widely known or clearly disclosed by pharmaceutical companies, fetal cell lines have been used for decades in the development and manufacture of many widely used vaccinations including measles/mumps/rubella (MMR), rubella, varicella (chickenpox), polio, hepatitis A, rabies, and shingles. For some vaccines, such as MMR, chickenpox, and hepatitis A, no ethically produced alternatives exist in the U.S.

Why Are Fetal Cells Ever Used to Manufacture Vaccines?

Although alternative ethically derived cell lines exist for vaccine development, pharmaceutical companies often prefer to use fetal cell lines because the characteristics of fetal cell lines are well known and because they do not contain significant contaminating viruses or bacteria that are often found in cells derived from animals.

For example, the polio vaccine in the mid-20th century was once manufactured using primary cell cultures harvested from the kidneys of monkeys. However, it was later discovered that the vaccines were often contaminated with a common monkey virus known as Simian Virus 40 (SV40). Although SV40 is harmless to humans, the incident alarmed vaccine manufacturers. Since then, vaccine developers have relied more heavily on cell lines rather than cell cultures taken from live animals.

To provide a more contemporary example, the FDA is currently investigating whether there is any potential for harm in using primate cells for vaccines and biologics. Simian foamy viruses (SFV) are widespread among non-human primates and it is known that these viruses are sometimes able to cause infection in humans. Although no one is ever known to have become sick as a result of SFV, the FDA is investigating whether there could be long-term effects due to this.

With cell lines, it is possible for researchers to know the characteristics and inherent flaws in the cells they are working with. Cell lines have been rigorously inspected by scientists across the industry for contaminating virus DNA or genetic mutations, whereas tissues taken directly from live animals may have unknown contaminants that may potentially be harmful to humans.

But why use fetal cell lines instead of animal cell lines or embryonated chicken eggs which have an excellent track record and have been used for decades to manufacture vaccines? Many vaccines, including vaccines for the seasonal flu, are grown in embryonated chicken eggs.

However, there is a potential for supply issues when using chicken eggs to manufacture vaccines. If, for instance, there were a widespread outbreak affecting chickens that causes the supply of eggs to suddenly drop, it could impact the ability for manufacturers to make vaccines quickly. The supply issue could especially present problems in the event of a pandemic such as the current COVID-19 pandemic where the ability to produce hundreds of millions of vaccines quickly is paramount.

More significantly however, some viruses, such as chickenpox for instance, do not grow well in animal cells. In such cases, there are few other options available other than using human cell lines for vaccine production.

Researchers also often prefer to use human cells for experiments testing the effect of drugs or vaccines because they more closely resemble how a drug will work in humans. But if human cells are better for manufacturing certain vaccines, why are fetal cell lines derived from aborted babies used instead of ethically derived adult cells?

Fetal cells are often preferred to adult cells because there are a limited number of splittings (passages) cells can undergo before they age and eventually die off. Fetal cell lines can be put through more passages than adult cells would and they are less prone to cell aging and senescence (when cells in a culture no longer divide and start dying off). Fetal cells are also less likely to be contaminated with human viruses or with genetic mutations or alterations that naturally occur as cells age.

Certain fetal cell lines such as PER.C6 are uniquely designed for manufacturing non-replicating viral vector vaccines. The viral vectors are genetically modified to prevent replication in the human body by deleting a portion of the viral vectors genome. PER.C6 cells are designed to fill in this deleted genome gap. In this way, vaccine manufacturers can replicate viral vectors for their vaccines in the lab but such viruses are incapable of producing an ongoing infection in the body.

However, there is no need to derive cell lines from aborted babies. Human cell lines for vaccines could easily be produced in an ethical manner if they are derived from adult cells. Cell lines could be derived from tissue discarded during surgery or from organs donated after death. If fetal cells are needed, there are thousands of stillbirths and neonatal deaths in the U.S. every year. There is no reason why cell cultures cannot be derived from tissue donated from prematurely born infants that, despite the best medical technology, aren't able to survive and die of natural causes while in a hospital setting. In these scenarios, developing a cell line would be no different from an ethical perspective than donating organs. In such context, however, it is imperative that any tissues obtained from naturally deceased neonates be strictly done in an ethical manner that respects the fundamental right to life of the child and the deceased child's bodily integrity. The procurement of tissue from the deceased could present a whole new set of ethical problems, particularly if the primary right to life of the donor is not sufficiently respected.

There is also the possibility that cell lines could be developed using cells ethically derived from human umbilical cord, cord blood, or placental tissue—tissues and organs that hospitals routinely discard as medical waste.

And ethical alternatives for human cell lines specially designed for producing viral vector vaccines may soon be available to vaccine manufacturers.

The John Paul II Medical Research Institute in collaboration with Cellular Engineering Technologies (CET) is currently in the process of developing an ethically-derived adult human cell line specially designed for growing viral vectors for vaccines that could replace ethically-fraught cell lines like HEK-293 and PER.C6.

But even so, it is not necessary for viral vector vaccines to be manufactured using fetal cell lines. Merck's Ebola vaccine, for instance, is a viral vector vaccine that is grown in monkey kidney cells.

Immortalized adult human cell lines that were ethically derived from the cancer cells of cancer patients have also been available to researchers for decades. Immortalized human cancerous cell lines have some of the benefits of fetal cell lines in that they are high passage cells (in fact cancerous cell lines divide infinitely). However, the genetic mutations in these cell lines often change too much and there is concern that these cells could be contaminated with oncogenic viruses (i.e. viruses that induce the formation of cancerous tumors). There is fear that DNA from oncogenic viruses could find their way into vaccines if these cell lines are used for manufacturing vaccines.

However, fetal cell lines such HEK-293 and PER.C6 are also tumorigenic. There is concern that these cell lines too could be infected with oncogenic viruses or oncogenic DNA.

Although rigorous purification processes are used when manufacturing vaccines, purification is an arduous process and it is practically impossible to filter out all contaminants. The FDA is currently researching tests and methods to better determine whether certain cell lines are safe enough for vaccine production.

For the current ongoing COVID-19 pandemic, there is no reason for vaccines to be developed using unethically-derived fetal cell lines. Many of the world's largest vaccine companies, including Sanofi, GSK, Merck, and Novavax, have demonstrated that it is possible to develop promising vaccine candidates using ethically-derived cells such as Vero, Sf9, and perhaps even embryonated chicken egg. Ethical alternatives exist.

If pharmaceutical companies are not willing to use ethical alternatives, then they must be required to.

The FDA is skipping phase 3 trials on COVID vaccines, turning the American people into guinea pigs for Big Pharma's high-profit medical experiments.

The arrogance of those who worship vaccine science is on full display now. The Food and Drug Administration (FDA) just made a commitment to authorize millions of new covid-19 vaccines before the already corrupted phase three trials are complete. The arrogance is so brazen, President Donald Trump is putting the military in charge of rolling the vaccine program out. The Department of Defense has already awarded a $138 million contract for prefilled syringes, as if safety and efficacy studies do not matter at all.

A senior Trump administration official said that they are “very confident that by year end we will have tens of millions of vaccines put into American arms.” The official told CNN that under Operation Warp Speed, vaccine manufacturing will begin by the end of summer. “In many cases it’s already underway,” the official said. “We’re acquiring the equipment, we’re setting up the space, and we’re acquiring, in some cases, the raw materials to do it. We have project teams that are assigned to go out to each manufacturing site.”

The FDA is clearing the way for hasty, untested vaccine that will constitute WAR CRIMES. FDA Commissioner Dr. Stephen Hahn is under intense political pressure to get millions of vaccine doses out before the 2020 election and has said the agency will authorize a new covid-19 vaccine for emergency use before the Phase Three clinical trials are complete. The emergency use authorization will not be a full approval, said Hahn, who will approve the vaccines as long as the drug company representatives overseeing the process are convinced that the postulated benefits of vaccination outweigh the risks of a hypothetical infection.

“This is not going to be a political decision,” Hahn said, in a pathetic display of doublespeak. “This is going to be a science, medicine, data decision.” The Phase Three trials typically involve thousands of patients and take multiple years to conduct. The emergency use authorization will push millions of vaccinations into healthcare workers and into other demographics of people who are determined to be “at greatest risk.” Ironically, vaccine injury is statistically more prevalent in people with weakened immune systems – the same group of people determined to be “at greatest risk.”

There will be no recourse or compensation for these vaccine injuries, nor will there be a system to detect and differentiate symptoms caused by the vaccines from real time infections. This is why new covid-19 outbreaks will be blamed on the “un-vaccinated” – pushing lawmakers and private companies to come up with new ways to coerce the unvaccinated population to submit.

The Drug companies and governments imposing their will over the people. This is insane, lunacy, or criminal, and probably all three!

As American freedom still hangs in the balance, government regulators and drug companies continue to impose their will over the people. Forced vaccination has been the goal all along. A senior Trump administration official said distribution of the emergency vaccine will be “nationwide” and will be a “joint venture” between the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention and the Department of Defense. The official also said that distribution of the vaccines will be “a collaborative process” between the private sector and the military. The Department of Defense “is handling all the logistics of getting the vaccines to the right place, at the right time, in the right condition.”

According to a fact sheet on the US Department of Health and Human Services website, the federal government wants to use the military to help deliver “300 million doses of a safe, effective vaccine for COVID-19 by January 2021.” This will be done by skipping over ten years of necessary safety studies and clinical trials that determine the vaccine’s one-sided (antibody augmentation) measurement of effectiveness. Any venture that involves the CDC is suspect completely because of their recent exposure for its dishonesty and fabricated data exaggeration. The CDC is a “for profit” company, not a government public health agency, and its first priority as a corporation is to earn profits for its stockholders. The CDC is disqualified to be an arbiter in this situation.

Hydrogel Biosensor: Implantable Nanotech to be Used in COVID Vaccines?

A hydrogel biosensor (a piece of implantable nanotech) may be used in an upcoming COVID vaccine to monitor your bodily activity – and more.

An implantable hydrogel biosensor, made via a DARPA-Gates funded Silicon Valley company, appears to be slated to be used in the upcoming COVID vaccine. The U.S. Department of Defense and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation have partnered with Profusa, a Silicon Valley company, to develop a piece of nanotechnology made out of hydrogel (similar to a soft contact lens) that can be injected and implanted under the skin using a vaccine as a delivery system. This sensor (or more accurately a biosensor), less than the size of a grain of rice, would effectively merge with the body. As a piece of nanotech, it would link up with the wireless network (the 5G-driven IoT or Internet of Things) and it would both transmit information about you and your body to authorities, as well as receive information. This article from Defense One was already reporting in March 2020 that the biosensor was on track to get FDA approval in early 2021, which is around the same time we have been told to expect the rollout of the COVID vaccine.

2-Part Hydrogel Biosensor Would Emit Various Signals

The DefenseOne article outlines the properties and capacities of the hydrogel biosensor:

“The sensor has two parts. One is a 3mm string of hydrogel, a material whose network of polymer chains is used in some contact lenses and other implants. Inserted under the skin with a syringe, the string includes a specially engineered molecule that sends a fluorescent signal outside of the body when the body begins to fight an infection. The other part is an electronic component attached to the skin. It sends light through the skin, detects the fluorescent signal and generates another signal that the wearer can send to a doctor, website, etc. It’s like a blood lab on the skin that can pick up the body’s response to illness before the presence of other symptoms, like coughing.”

Profusa is another of these Silicon Valley companies with ties to the U.S. Military Industrial Complex. It boasts on its website that it “is pioneering tissue-integrating biosensors for continuous monitoring of body chemistries.” Whether it’s Big Tech companies Google, Facebook or Twitter, or smaller players like Profusa, the Military and Silicon Valley are joined at the hip and form an important part of the NWO (New World Order). DARPA (Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency), the agency tasked with dreaming up exotic new lethal technologies to enslave and kill more and more people, threw some money at Profusa in 2011, and continues to work closely with them. Profusa is also tied to the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, which is not surprising, since eugenicist and depopulation advocate William Gates has been almost single-handedly orchestrating this fake pandemic. You may recall that William Gates funded the Imperial College in London whose ridiculous and ill-advised models forecast doom that never even got close to eventuating. According to this article, Profusa is currently conducting a study in collaboration the Imperial College. Profusa’s website states:

“Rather than being isolated from the body, the biosensors work fully integrated within the body’s tissue — without any metal device or electronics, thereby overcoming the body’s attempts to reject it. To date, the injected biosensors have functioned for as long as four years. Smaller than a grain of rice, each biosensor is a flexible fiber about 5 mm long and half a millimeter wide, comprised of a porous scaffold that induces capillary and cellular ingrowth from surrounding tissue. The hydrogel is linked to light-emitting fluorescent molecules that continuously signal in proportion to the concentration of a body chemical, such as oxygen, glucose, or other biomolecule of interest.”

Hacking the Human Body with Foreign Synthetic Nanotech Objects

Profusa wants to know your entire body chemistry – your oxygen levels, your glucose levels, your hormone levels, your heart rate, your respiratory rate, your body temperature, with the (unstated) capability of expanding into areas of knowing your menstrual cycle (if you are a woman), your sex life, your emotions and more – and then wants to transmit all that information to some kind of medical authority, although of course it is patently obvious this data would end up in the hands of the NWO conspirators who would use it to manipulate the masses. Profusa put out this press release Injectable Body Sensors Take Personal Chemistry to a Cell Phone Closer to

Reality in 2018. They are perfecting the art of hacking the human body, fooling it into accepting synthetic materials and objects disguised so they won't be recognized as foreign.

The WHO just reported over 260,000 new cases of the Covid CONJOB-19 in just a short time. Now an infection does not have that kind of lightening quick infection rate. So how come so many cases in just 24 hours. Well, if you put a potato in a microwave, it will get burning hot in a few minutes. Just like a human body creating the Corona viruses to combat radiation poisoning if such radiation is turned on, right? It's called push button fear.

The answer is related to 5G technology. Turn off the 5G and the virus will go away, as fast as it started. The eye opener that augments all the many 5G studies in respect of radiation poisoning and cell destruction causing the alleged Corona virus symptoms that are making people sick. 5G technologies is what causes Covid19 at specific energy frequency. This is all about Tesla tech (the negative harmful end of the spectrum/Tesla preferred the positive side) targeting population centers. The idea of a virus and/or bioweapon is a misdirect but comes into play when they want you to take the injection in order to "cure" the so-called phantom illness that is caused by this invisible tech which is the Tesla tech....targeted...scaler waves directed energy weapons. These SCALER WAVES have also been shown to cause California fires (DEW) and Earthquakes, and hurricanes (weather wars) etc. It appears that it is all about the size and intensity of the directed energy waves that determine the effect. And the effect is RADIATION which creates a "corona effect" around the cells leading to typical radiation sickness...flu-like symptoms.

When the above theory becomes so obvious the damage will become terminal. Sadly, humanity is doomed until the truth becomes known, the facts and the evidence is huge that there is no virus. The Vaccine is a bio-weapon! And the bio-weapon in Wuhan was a misdirect to cover the frequency tests. There is no virus, no contagion no need for vaccines or social distancing! This is all a deliberate misdirect to control populations. They are targeting and killing humans using scaler waves in order to cover their tracks to control populations. They are targeting and killing humans using scaler waves. The links below will provide proof that this is the case.
