

Are the COVID Tests a Way to Surreptitiously Infect or Implant People?

The COVID PCR tests are administered with a 6-inch (15cm) long cotton swab through the nose, which goes to the very back of your throat. Why? This is a very serious question people should demand answers to an uncommon method of invading the human brain.

The swab touches the sensitive cribriform plate with direct access to your brain. Is there an ulterior design to these tests?

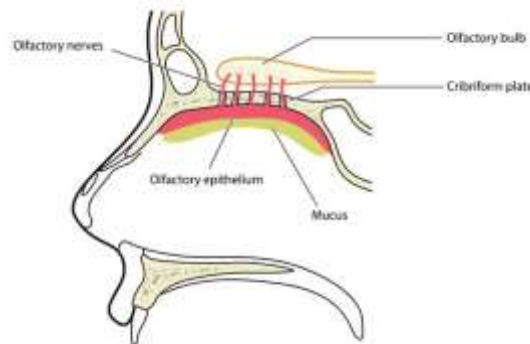

Are the COVID tests with 6-inch (15cm) nasal swabs a way to secretly infect or implant people with direct access to the brain?

The COVID test that were rolled out around the world, roughly in line with 1-3-30 plan of the Rockefeller Foundation, are the main focus of this current phase of Operation Coronavirus. The more people tested, the more positive cases recorded, which fuels the official scare narrative and keeps the fear the alive to justify yet more tyranny. However, there may be something else going on too.

We need to ask ourselves whether these COVID tests are in fact a clever way to gain secret access to the inside of our bodies, especially our brains. The nasal swabs being used (called nasopharyngeal or oropharyngeal) are incredibly long (around 6 inches or 15 cm) which means they reach to the very back of our throats. Is there any medical reason why the swabs must be this length? These particular COVID tests are PCR tests; numerous reports have reported how flawed and unsuitable PCR tests are. Could these COVID tests be used to surreptitiously infect people (with some disease-causing agent), deliver the vaccine (which they claim they are still developing) or even implant people (with nanotechnology such as microchips)? COVID Tests: Targeting or Accessing the Cribriform Plate?

In human anatomy, the cribriform plate is a midline bone important as part both of the cranium and of the nose which transmits the olfactory nerves that carry the sense of smell. It is a very delicate and fragile part of the body. Why on earth do the COVID tests contain a swab (a padded stick) which can poke and prod this delicate bone? Could it be because the cribriform plate allows access to the brain? Jim Stone recently alluded to this in a post entitled The Coronavirus test is not credible and likely to be for clandestine brain access reproduced at this website:

“They are claiming the virus wrecks the nervous systems of a large percentage of people, leaving lasting neurological problems and brain damage. But I’d like to ask – is it really a virus doing that, or are the tests doing that? Folks, the coronavirus tests themselves, in many cases, (there are probably different types) but in many cases they are obviously what is causing the brain damage. Easily explained:

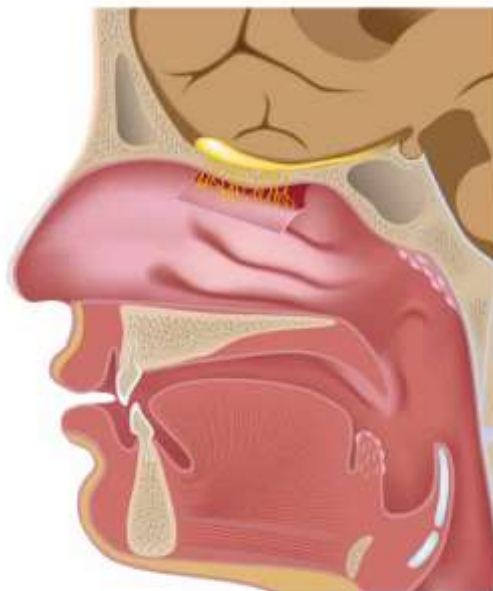

Many of the tests, (all of them that use the incredibly long “swab”) take their samples from the cribriform plate, which is a millimeter thick bone at the top of the nasal cavity that is perforated with many holes that go directly into the brain cavity. These holes are what your olfactory nerves pass through, and there are many (the bone is similar to a coarse screen). If you wanted to sabotage someone by planting a clandestine brain virus, nanotech, or plant a chip in someone, this would be the place to do it because perhaps a doctor could get a chip out but individuals certainly never could without perforating that very thin bone (that is not really even bone, it is about half nerves) and anyone attempting to do an extraction from there would likely end up killing themselves. Any chemicals, viruses, nanotech or whatever else they wanted to put there will have immediate access to the brain and you can forget about getting that out, once it’s in, it is in. It would be literally right on the brain when placed, and go right in.

People complain about the tests being excruciatingly painful with the pain lasting for days. For what reason would the tests need to touch the most brain accessible part of the human body? Are the ones that do really tests at all? DNA tests are done with a simple mouth swab, and it’s ridiculous to think any virus test – when you supposedly can spread it by coughing, – would not be the same. Something is screwy with these tests. They have GOT TO be fake, (or at least the ones that literally swab the brain are). No wonder why they hurt for days and GEE, getting your olfactory nerves nailed by whatever is on that swab is probably what is causing people to permanently lose their sense of smell.

COMMON SENSE. I bet you did not know how nasty that test really is. Avoid the test at all costs.

OK, I did look at that article a few days ago, and I had dismissed it at the time... I could not fathom the possibility that these monsters were using their barbaric "PCR test" methods as a means of DAMAGING our brains.... Ethics aside, I could not see even these foul creatures stooping to such a horrible low.... But again we are dealing with monsters with no human conscience here, right?"

Olfactory Nerve

Here is another quote from the same website (but this one is not from Jim Stone):

"... they conducted the "tests" by inserting a gawd damn 6 INCH long (15cm) swab right up EACH nostril until it reached way into the back of their nasal passages. Then the testers proceeded to twist the swabs for about 10-15 seconds in each nostril.... Then they removed the swabs and inserted them into the test tubes to be sent off to the laboratories for 'analysis'.... I honestly had to stop and think for the moment.. WHY in the hell would they need to insert such a long swab all the way to the back of the nasal passage ways in the first place? And then to twist the swabs on that palate in the rear of the nasal passage against the soft tissue seems very barbaric to me as well! Would that motion alone cause damage to that palate and possibly create a much WORSE scenario than what this 'virus' would do?

And all of the people that I did talk to told me the same story that they had ‘headaches’ and in some cases a feeling of nausea and severe sinus pain that followed.... As I have always been a sinus headache sufferer and have had such pain in the back of my own nasal cavities for years, I know what they are going through..... And all this just to get a ‘sample’ of this supposed virus’ RNA to verify that someone is positive? Again it seems pretty barbaric, and to me there would be much simpler means of getting tissue samples rather than possibly damage the back of our nasal cavities!”

My daughter-in-law is a RN at a hospital and confirmed to me that all of what was described above is true. She expressed similar reactions to just what may be at work here.

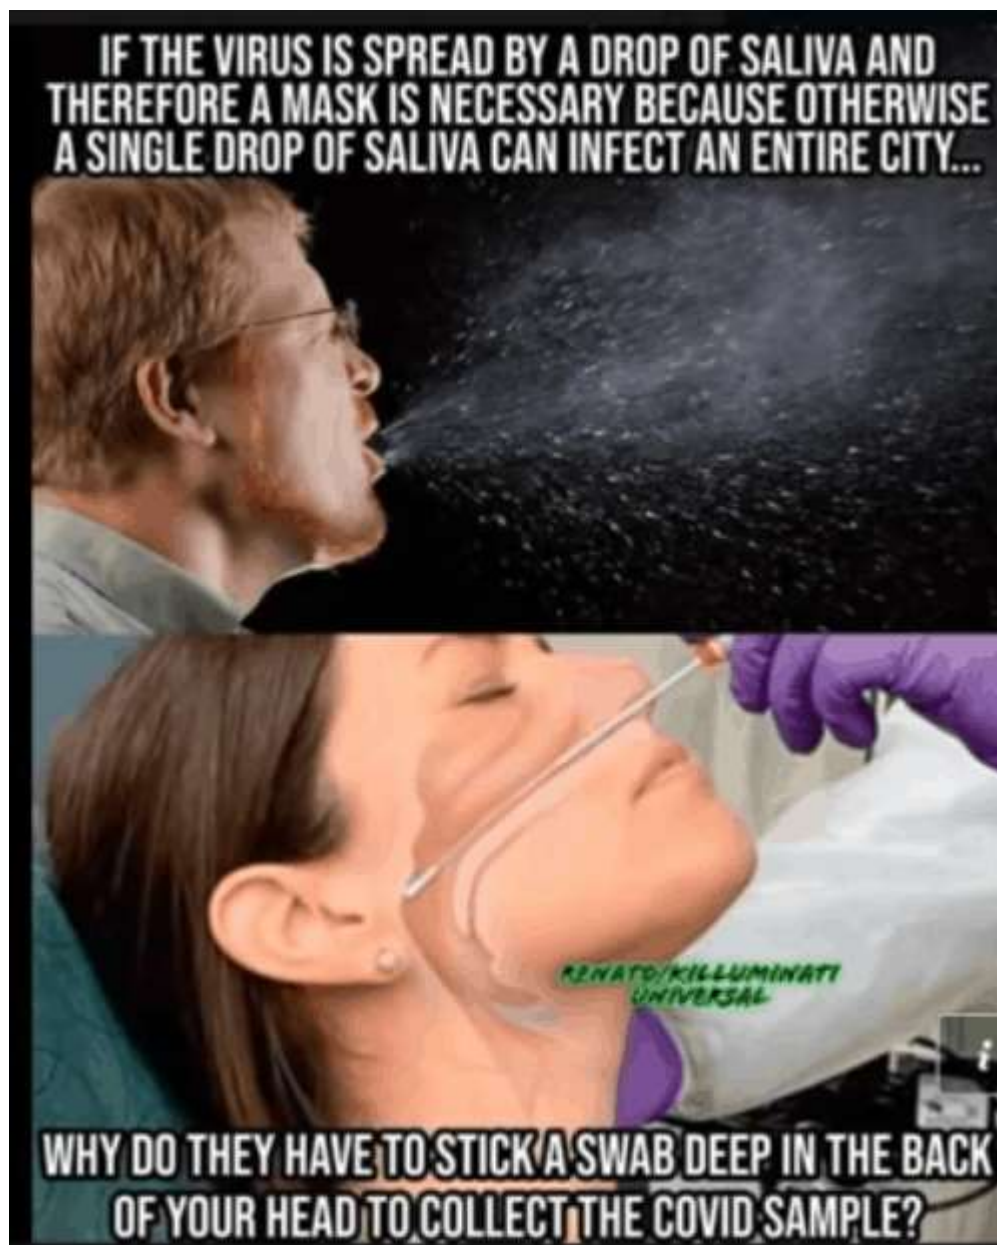

There is something highly suspicious about these COVID tests. At the very least, we need to remember that batches of the COVID tests have been proven to be contaminated, sometimes with coronavirus itself (e.g. in the U.S. and the UK) – although fact checkers claim the ‘virus’ could not spread or infect people, just make test results ineffective. Given the NWO (New World Order) objective of a completely microchipped population, I would not put it past the NWO conspirators to conduct such a horrific and clandestine method of implanting people without their knowledge under the guise of helping them.

On the topic of invasive medical interventions, before we even get to vaccines and nanochips, or even nasopharyngeal tests, what about the temperature laser guns? You may be unlucky enough to live in an area where businesses are now doing thermal screening by pointing a gun at your forehead. Medical consequences aside, this is blatant and disgusting conditioning to get people used to having a gun pointed at their head. Think about what we’re allowing if we accept this new normal where gun-like devices are routinely pointed at our heads. Think about the tremendous harm we’re doing to children if we allow them to become accustomed to this. This interesting video discusses how the infrared ray from the gun may be damaging the pineal gland, the gateway to higher energy realms and consciousness. The man in the video quotes an Australian nurse:

“I’m really worried ...are we being desensitized to be targeted at the head and also causing potential health issues by aiming an infrared ray to the pineal gland?”

I went to a shopping mall and people were lining up to get their temperature taken by an employee who obviously was not a medic and was not properly educated on how to correctly perform this procedure. Many were shocked when it was my turn and I took the gun that was being directed at my forehead and re-directed it to my wrist. I spoke softly but firmly and told that employee that an infrared thermometer must never be pointed at someone’s forehead, especially babies and young children. In addition it requires basic knowledge of how to properly read someone’s temperature, i.e. placing a thermometer on the wrist or elbow fold is much more accurate and much less harmful. It was very disturbing to me to observe children getting used to seeing an object in the shape of a gun aiming at their forehead and without any negative reaction from the adults as if this was normal and acceptable.

As a medical professional, I refuse to directly target the pineal gland which is located directly in the center of the forehead, with an infrared ray. However, most people agree to go through this several times a day! Our pineal glands must be protected as it is crucial for our health now and in the future.

A standard infrared thermometer absorbs infrared but doesn't emit it, so from that perspective they are safe. The problem with safety comes from laser thermometers, which emit a beam of light to highlight the area of the object being assessed to ensure accuracy. This beam is categorized as a Class II laser which emit visible light below one milliwatt and can be sold as 'pointers' used to direct attention to information on smart boards or white boards in lectures. Although they are generally classed as being safe, they can damage the retina if you stare into the beam. Lasers produce an intense beam of light which can cause laser radiation in the form of thermal tissue damage. The dangers increase the closer you are to the laser the more serious the injury potential."

The point of this particular post is to raise awareness and ask questions. This article doesn't have the answers as to what is really in these COVID tests and whether they are designed with an ulterior motive. Hopefully these initial questions will spur further investigation from people, or at the very least encourage people to be highly skeptical of willingly taking these tests without a second thought. It must be clear by now that nothing about Operation Coronavirus is benign, not even the tests. Every aspect of this agenda must be carefully scrutinized. Submitting to the test itself is tacit acquiescence that the test works and is necessary for public health and safety – both of which are patently false.

People should be asking these very important questions:

1) Please provide proof that what is being referred to as the SARS-COV-2 virus (COVID-19) actually exists. Proof MUST include actual evidence that the virus has actually been isolated, positively identified, and then successfully used to infect a healthy volunteer (the standard protocol using Koch's postulates).

2) Please provide proof that any of the tests being used actually identify whether someone has what is being referred to as the SARS-COV-2 virus (COVID-19). Proof

MUST include actual evidence of what these tests actually test for, and how whatever is being tested for proves one does or doesn't have this alleged virus. Proof must also include the expected number of false positives and false negatives the test(s) produce, and how those two designations are determined.

3) Please provide proof that what is being referred to as the SARS-COV-2 virus (COVID-19) can actually be spread through contact with bodily fluids of any kind. Proof MUST include actual evidence showing healthy volunteers being infected by those alleged to have what is being referred to as the SARS-COV-2 virus (COVID-19).

4) Please provide proof that wearing a mask can actually stop any viral size particle from going through the mask in either direction. Proof MUST include a comparison of the size of the weave of the fabric used for the mask, relative to the size of the alleged viral particle.

If they can't provide any proof of these things, then please stop pretending that they know what you're talking about. Note the subtle “666” in the social distancing symbol sign.

What is REALLY going on is the PLANNED economic collapse to usher in the tyrannical one-world government, which you are helping by complying with orders that have NO BASIS IN REALITY and are, in fact, specifically designed to make people sicker, both physically and mentally/spiritually.

The one-world government has a stated goal of reducing the world's population by over 90% through wars and vaccines. Why would anyone in their right-mind help them do that? Why would anyone in their right-mind continually help the very sick (crazy) people who intend to steal everything from the rest of us before torturing us and murdering us?

IF everyone stopped wearing their WORTHLESS masks, it would send the CORRECT message to the puppet politicians and their money-masters that no one is going to fall for their nonsense anymore BEFORE they murder BILLIONS as they've told us they're going to do.

The Fauci, Birx, Gates narrative is falling apart as the statistical data proves this to be another hoax, based upon the Fauci playbook from previous hoaxed viruses tied to Dr. Fauci going back thirty-six years.

The life you save could be your own or someone you love. Do not submit to your brain being probed with an 6-inch (15cm) nasal swab. There is something very suspicious about all this and you cannot rule out that they are hiding something much more devious and harmful. The swab touches the sensitive cribriform plate with direct access to your brain. Is there an ulterior design to these tests?

Most people are more likely to wind up six feet under because of almost anything else under the sun other than COVID-19.

The CDC just came out with a report that should be earth-shattering to the narrative of the political class, yet it will go into the thick pile of vital data and information about the virus that is not getting out to the public. For the first time, the CDC has attempted to offer a real estimate of the overall death rate for COVID-19, and under its most likely scenario, the number is 0.26%. Officials estimate a 0.4% fatality rate among those who are symptomatic and project a 35% rate of asymptomatic cases among those infected, which drops the overall infection fatality rate (IFR) to just 0.26% — almost exactly where Stanford researchers pegged it a month ago.

Until now, we have been ridiculed for thinking the death rate was that low, as opposed to the 3.4% estimate of the World Health Organization, which helped drive the panic and the lockdowns. Now the CDC is agreeing to the lower rate in plain ink.

Plus, ultimately we might find out that the IFR is even lower because numerous studies and hard counts of confined populations have shown a much higher percentage of asymptomatic cases. Simply adjusting for a 50% asymptomatic rate would drop their fatality rate to 0.2% — exactly the rate of fatality Dr. John Ionnidis of Stanford University projected.

More importantly, the overall death rate is meaningless because the numbers are so lopsided. Given that at least half of the deaths were in nursing homes, a back-of-the-envelope estimate would show that the infection fatality rate for non-nursing home residents would only be 0.1% or 1 in 1,000. And that includes people of all ages and all health statuses outside of nursing homes. Since nearly all of the deaths are those with comorbidities.

The CDC estimates the death rate from COVID-19 for those under 50 is 1 in 5,000 for those with symptoms, which would be 1 in 6,725 overall, but again, almost all those who die have specific comorbidities or underlying conditions. Those without them are more likely to die in a car accident. And schoolchildren, whose lives, mental health, and education we are destroying, are more likely to get struck by lightning.

COVID 19 is a massive global occult ritual initiation ceremony:

1. *Ritual Mask-Wearing
2. *Ritual Hand-Washing
3. *Ritual "Social Distancing"
4. *Ritual Lockdowns

Why you are wearing a mask, the pagan ritual of transformation.

The only question that remains is: do you consent? The life you save could be your own or someone you love.
