

Depopulation

#1 Global Issue Since 1968

Part 3

From The First Global Revolution

As tyranny continues its march out into the open, it is increasingly becoming cloaked in green. Saving our environment has been around for a long time and continues to get priority as harmony with nature.

Under the guise of saving humanity, a chorus of recent announcements within elite circles, think-tanks, educational institutions, and the halls of science are calling for drastic measures to stop the planet's inevitable implosion from an overshoot carrying capacity.

A United Nations policy paper two decades ago outlined the building blocks for a world government that would enforce a "heavy-handed" approach toward humanity's impact on the environment, as this new epoch of The Anthropocene Age has begun to negatively alter the planet in irrevocable ways.

A rather infamous book, from a rather infamous group called "The Club of Rome", is making its reappearance as humanity hurtles toward demise if its stewardship is not turned over to technocrats.

'Limits to Growth' (1972) is nothing short of a blueprint for population reduction and neo-feudalism; or, as Yale economist Henry Wallich stated at the time of its release, its implementation means "consigning billions to poverty."

It appears that this plan has been green-lighted by the elite, as recent MIT research validates the conclusions drawn by 'Limits to Growth' at this crucial time when we see the world economy imploding, and a jack-booted green police ready to hit the streets. According to MIT, we are headed toward a guaranteed planet-wide economic collapse and "precipitous population decline" if we do not heed the words of The Club of Rome.

Austerity riots and suicides are filling the streets throughout Europe, as draconian measures are being taken to curb runaway debt.

This debt has provably been created by the Ponzi scheme of international banksters who have employed a loan-shark framework that is only paying dividends to those in position to buy up deliberately collapsed assets for pennies on the dollar. This scheme led to the indebtedness of nations to the World Bank and the IMF. An excellent book written in 2005 was a book entitled, 'Confessions of An Economic Hit Man', by John Perkins. Mr. Perkins describes how it was his job to go to third world countries and pitch how they could develop their countries with the assistance of the International central banks by using their natural resources as collateral for loans to build everything from clean water projects to roads to infrastructure, at attractive interest rates. If a country did not want to take this path to control a developing country, then the other "hit men" might lead to regime change by assassination or coup.

The global elite continue to ignore that the problems which have been generated across the globe have very little to do with true resource shortages, unsustainable economies, or overpopulation; but rather the centralized control, mismanagement, and outright theft by corporate entities using globalization as a means of reducing sovereignty and self-determination.

Resource-rich countries in places like Africa and those in the Middle East have long been targeted for plunder by colonialists and have never been rightly permitted to exist free of outside manipulation.

This stratagem has now entered the West, where we are seeing Europe looted in similar fashion, and the resulting strife is used to divide and rule. It is the coordinated agenda of a network of think-tanks, NGOs, and international financiers well-versed in the methods of divide and conquer that form the real government of the world.

When one begins to piece together the scope of this deliberate looting, and the inevitable call for solutions from the very same players who should be held responsible, one might conclude that any of their calls for intervention based on humanitarian ideals should be judged a complete scam.

At or near the center of a web which has been woven using academia, top economists, mainstream media propaganda, climatologists, anthropologists, NGO's, think-tanks and human rights groups - well meaning, and not-so well meaning - is The Club of Rome.

First, it is important to understand the genesis of The Club of Rome and its philosophy, as it might demonstrate an inherent misanthropy that should make us skeptical of their calls for sustainability, true equality, or the betterment for individuals who comprise the human race. Most of the world is unaware of The Club of Rome and how it has been instrumental in the depopulation around the world.

Here comes the Hegelian Dialectic. It works all the time! The elite of the European world were all educated in Jesuit colleges and universities and were well-schooled in the methods of "Thesis – Antithesis – Synthesis" or to create the problem, analyze the reaction and then offer the solution. First comes causing the problem and watch for the reaction.

Problem-Reaction

The Club of Rome think-tank is likely to have been conceived in 1965 at David Rockefeller's estate in Bellagio, Italy at an international conference called "The Conditions of World Order."

The Rockefeller Foundation Bellagio Center is a 50 acre property located at the heart of Lake Como in Northern Italy. The Foundation's proud history with the Bellagio Center began in 1959, when Ella Holbrook Walker, the American Principessa della Torre e Tasso donated the property to the Foundation "for the promotion of international understanding." For over 60 years the Center has supported many meaningful advances through its residency and conference programs and is globally renowned for fostering cross-cultural and interdisciplinary exchange.

Twenty-one "scholars, writers, and scientists" met to discuss the role of "intellectuals" in the formation of a new world order.

It was their larger follow-up meeting of 75 people in Rome, 1968 when the group formally took the name, The Club of Rome, which has come to comprise the very top echelon within all fields relating to human development and politics. In essence, that means virtually every aspect of human life, and I mean every aspect. The elite see the struggle between "us and them", where "us" represents the world's rich and famous against the "them", the masses of humanity, for which they see as a cancer on the Earth. How to rid the Earth of this cancer has dominated their thinking since 1968.

Despite its trappings of being devoted to a better world for all mankind, it is overwhelmingly staffed by those born and bred from mega wealth, and those who have a stated worldview that is not compatible with many of the Club's purported goals.

This worldview was encapsulated in a follow-up book to 'Limits to Growth', called The First Global Revolution, which 21 years later laments and chastises the failure of wider humanity to aggressively implement the Club's previous suggestions, while openly touting manipulation as a way toward global unity. Note the language today of the World Economic Forum, it is referred to as the 4th Industrial Revolution.

There are many key passages in this book that give a clear indication of the mindset leading us through the present into the future, but a particularly striking section comes when they discuss the "limits of democracy:"

Democracy is not a panacea. It cannot organize everything, and is unaware of its own limits.

In its present form democracy is not well suited for the tasks ahead.

We overlook (psychologically speaking, we deny) our ignorance and say we lack the political will. The crucial need is to revitalize democracy and give it a breadth of perspective that will enable it to cope with the evolving global situation. In other words, is this new world we find ourselves in governable? The answer is probably not with the existing structures and attitudes.

This is an interesting statement in light of the one made by University of Oregon Professor, Kari Norgaard, who recently suggested that those who believe that man-made climate change is a hoax should be treated as mentally defective racists.

In a letter to Obama, she stated:

"Policymakers should not wait for public opinion to take necessary action," she writes, adding, "Public opinion does matter in a democracy, but this is a time when following it would be a serious mistake."

"And of course, "policymakers" are very often not even the democratically elected governments themselves, but international institutions and councils - like the Club of Rome."

"In order to justify such rapid movement taking place outside the framework of democracy, a threat so vast and so all-encompassing that mobilization against it must be swift and aggressive is to be sought."

The Club of Rome sought it... and they found it, by their own admission:

The common enemy of humanity is man. In searching for a new enemy to unite us, we came up with the idea that pollution, the threat of global warming, water shortages, famine and the like would fit the bill. In their totality and their interactions these phenomena do constitute a common threat which must be confronted together.

But in designating these dangers as the enemy, we fall into the trap, which we already have warned readers about, namely mistaking symptoms for causes. All these dangers are caused by human intervention in natural processes, and it is only through changed attitudes and behavior that they can be overcome.

The real enemy is humanity itself.

Solution

How is it that if these elite intellectuals truly care for the human race, we see the suppression of true alternative energy, the manipulation of climate science to achieve anti-human ends, and a centralization of power that has only led to a runaway train of elite-induced death?

We are told of how vaccines will make us healthier when they kill and maim. To the elite, vaccines are a sanitized method of death without the picture of war and devastation.

Without our knowledge or oversight, GMOs have been introduced to combat food shortages, when they are leading to mass starvation, suicide, and horrible consequences for human health and the environment; all while self-sufficiency based on organic principles has shown to be the consistent solution that could actually feed the planet and establish sustainable economies. And, of course, we are told that fiat, debt-based currency will lead to global enrichment, when it only has led us to our current age of austerity.

For example, In 2011 New Zealand leaders tried to ban people from farming but the bill did not pass, although some of the proposed regulations were passed and incorporated into the Food Act of 2014. These did make gardening illegal. We have seen many states in the U.S. ban residents from planting gardens, collecting rain water, or building ponds, or even building small man-made lakes for watering animals. Local ordinances are often scripted by UN regulations these days.

The all-encompassing problem faced by humanity on a global scale is indeed real.

However, the proven track records of those like the Club of Rome claiming the right to uplift humanity is dismal. In the foundational areas of human peace and prosperity - economy, health, environment, science, law, politics, and philosophy - these so-called elites have failed dramatically.

Due to the length of time their misdirection has been in effect, it would be unwise to dismiss this as an extended series of miscalculations that approaches statistical impossibility. Rather, it must be concluded that it is by design.

Once we draw that inevitable conclusion, their advice takes on new, much darker meaning; one that inspires us to say with confidence: the collective problem faced by humanity is collectivism itself, under the umbrella of a global administration with an agenda to deliberately collapse the economy and reduce the population.

As hard as it is to admit, the stated agenda by green global government for uplifting humanity cannot be the real goal - for how can the destiny of humankind be uplifted through reduced living conditions and extermination?

We are at the crossroads now, as humanity faces the apocalypse brought about by nihilists and misanthropes.

As the Club of Rome itself has stated:

“The acceleration of critical trends and cross-impacts among them indicates that the ‘window of opportunity’ for pulling out of the present global crisis and breaking through to a more peaceful and sustainable world is likely to be no more than four to five years from the end of 2008.”

This is close in time to the Mayan 2012 prophecy for the end of the current world. The period around the end of 2012 was likely to be a turbulent one for this and other reasons. Predictions coming from the physical sciences foresee disturbances in the geomagnetic, electromagnetic and related fields that embed the planet causing significant damage to telecommunications and impacting many aspects of human activity and health. Little if none of those concerns materialized.

For the esoteric traditions the end of 2012 was to be the end of the known world, although the more optimistic interpretations speak of a new world taking the place of the old. The time from 2012 until the threshold of 2030 is the time when humanity will face two divergent paths leading to this "new world:"

The first possibility is massive decentralization away from harmful bureaucratic and autocratic rule that has caused economic booms and busts, industrial and corporate cronyism and abuse, and neo-feudal serfdom; the second is a path down which we are dragged kicking and screaming through the collapse point prophesied for 2030, ushered in by the technocracy self-fulfilling a world that it wants to be fully born in 2052. We are in the throes of what is commonly referred to as the age of technocracy.

That world redefines what dystopia means for the average human subjected to its ultimately trans-human agenda.

Again, The Club of Rome describes the world of 2052 under its philosophy and esteemed leadership:

- Redefining the values which effectively guide the development of society
- Developing a new economy, both in theory and practice, so that,
 - natural and social capital are correctly valued
 - new financial markets deliver the goods and services mankind needs in and for a sustainable world
 - sufficient jobs are created to allow a decent income for all
- Creating appropriate governance institutions on a global, national and local level

Its six goals to "shape" this future are:

1. Societal values, which are essential for a sustainable and equitable society, are fully reflected in all economic decisions.

2. The economies of the world reflect the value of natural and social capital; markets operate in a fair and transparent manner and deliver the goods and services required for a sustainable society.
3. A more equitable distribution of income both within and between countries.
4. Access to meaningful work, which provides enough income to lead a decent life, is guaranteed and recognized as an essential human right. Job generation has become a top priority for all investments, costs for unemployment are considered in decision-making.
5. Ecology is seen as a binding constraint for all forms of human activity and is therefore managed in a manner which reflects its biophysical and economic value. Never should the world be in overshoot.
6. Appropriate governance systems at a local, national and global level, which can manage the transition into an equitable and sustainable global world, are established.

Even if some of these guidelines seem attractive on the surface, we must always return to who is directing the implementation.

The systematic looting of individual wealth and production has been collectivized by the power elite with the intention of giving it back to humanity at a fraction of its initial worth - this is their track record with such initiatives as Agenda 21, and the world we currently see as we look around. It is the playbook of every tyranny that has ever disgraced the planet.

When we admit to ourselves that what elites state as the world they wish to see, versus the world they are bound to create based on their actions, then we have to admit that the conclusions drawn by MIT in support of the Club of Rome are not those they plan to avoid, but something they desire to use to assert further control. And it will take place a lot faster with them and their like in charge of all decisions.

We really are about to witness The First Global Revolution, and it is rooted in information and ideas.

Despite the challenges we face to alter our course from the one that has been chosen for us, there is one concept that we should take from their mission, for it represents the secret to all they have done so far:

"Change the Story - Change the System".

(Club of Rome)

Let's start telling a story that future generations will be pleased to hear, instead of the one we are currently forced to recount.

This group was organized in 1968 by the Morgenthau Group for the purpose of accelerating the plans to have the New World Order in place by the year 2000. The Club of Rome developed a plan to divide the world into ten regions or kingdoms.

In 1976, the United States Association of the Club of Rome (USACOR) was formed for the purpose of shutting down the U.S. economy gradually.

The Technetronic Era

Henry Kissinger was then, and still is, an important agent in the service of the Royal Institute for International Affairs, a member of the Club of Rome and the Council on Foreign Relations.

Kissinger's role in destabilizing the United States by means of three wars, the Middle East, Korea and Vietnam, is well known, as is his role in the Gulf War, in which the U.S. Army acted as mercenaries for the Committee of 300 in bringing Kuwait back under its control and at the same time making an example out of Iraq so that other small nations would not be tempted to work out their own destiny.

The Club of Rome, acting on Committee of 300 orders to eliminate General ul Haq, had no compunction in sacrificing the lives of a number of U.S. servicemen on board the flight, including a U.S. Army Defense Intelligence Agency group headed by Brigadier General Herber Wassom. General ul Haq had been warned by the Turkish Secret Service not to travel by plane, as he was targeted for a mid-air bombing. With this in mind, ul Haq took the United States team with him as "an insurance policy," as he commented to his inner circle advisors.

The Club of Rome and its financiers under the title of the German Marshall Fund were two highly-organized conspiratorial bodies operating under cover of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and that the majority of Club of Rome executives were drawn from NATO. The Club of Rome formulated all of what NATO claimed as its policies and, through the activities of Committee of 300 member Lord Carrington, was able to split NATO into two factions, a political (left wing) power group and its former military alliance. The Club of Rome is still one of the most important foreign policy arms of the Committee of 300, and the other being the Bilderbergers. It was put together in 1968 from hard-core members of the original Morgenthau group on the basis of a telephone call made by the late Aurello Peccei for a new and urgent drive to speed up the plans of the One World Government now called the New World Order. Peccei's call was answered by the most subversive "future planners" drawn from the United States, France, Sweden, Britain, Switzerland and Japan that could be mustered.

During the period 1968-1972, The Club of Rome became a cohesive entity of new-science scientists, Globalist, future planners and internationalists of every stripe. As one delegate put it, "We became Joseph's Coat of Many Colors." Peccei's book 'Human Quality' formed the basis of the doctrine adopted by NATO's political wing. Peccei headed the Atlantic Institute's Economic Council for three decades while he was the Chief Executive Officer for Giovanni Agnelli's Fiat Motor Company. Agnelli, a member of an ancient Italian Black Nobility family of the same name, is one of the most important members of the Committee of 300. He played a leading role in development projects in the Soviet Union.

The Club of Rome is a conspiratorial umbrella organization, a marriage between Anglo-American financiers and the old Black Nobility families of Europe, particularly the so-called "nobility" of London, Venice and Genoa. The key to the successful control of the world is their ability to create and manage savage economic recessions and eventual depressions. The Committee of 300 looks to social convulsions on a global scale, followed by depressions, as a softening-up technique for bigger things to come, as its principal method of creating masses of people all over the world who will become its "welfare" recipients of the future. The Black Nobility crowd actually do choose the candidates for pope when it is time to elect a new pope of the Roman Catholic Church.

The committee appears to base much of its important decisions affecting mankind on the philosophy of Polish aristocrat, Felix Dzerzinski, who regarded mankind as being slightly above the level of cattle. As a close friend of British intelligence agent Sydney Reilly (Reilly was actually Dzerzinski's controller during the Bolshevik Revolution's formative years), he often confided in Reilly during his drinking bouts. Dzerzinski was, of course, the beast who ran the Red Terror apparatus. He once told Reilly, while the two were on a drinking binge, that, "Man is of no importance. Look at what happens when you starve him. He begins to eat his dead companions to stay alive. Man is only interested in his own survival. That is all that counts. All the Spinoza stuff is a lot of rubbish."

With regard to the Third World, the Club of Rome's Harland Cleveland prepared a report which was the height of cynicism. At the time, Cleveland was United States Ambassador to NATO. Essentially, the paper said it would be up to Third World nations to decide among themselves which populations should be eliminated. As Peccei later wrote (based on the Cleveland Report):

"Damaged by conflicting policies of three major countries and blocs, roughly patched up here and there, the existing international economic order is visibly coming apart at the seams.... The prospect of the necessity of the recourse to triage deciding who must be saved is a very grim one indeed. But, if lamentably, events should come to such a pass, the right to make such decisions cannot be left to just a few nations because it would lend themselves to ominous power over life of the world's hungry."

The global elite plan has been sliding further and further behind since the turn of the Millennium. Achieving Global Governance demands constant planning and tweaking the plan, dealing with the contingencies that disrupt their plans, and so what was to be in 2000 has required another quarter-century. Even with where the world elite are today, they continue to be thwarted and their chaos continues unabated.

The global coronavirus pandemic has accelerated several troubling trends already in force. Among them are exponential debt growth, rising dependency on government, and scaled-up central bank interventions into markets and the economy. I viewed a YouTube showing downtown London at the height of the business day, it was virtually dead, shops empty and locked shut. The subway and trains were all but empty at a time when the city would be crowded with tens of thousands of workers and shoppers.

Central bankers now appear poised to embark on their biggest power play ever. Federal Reserve Chairman Jerome Powell, in coordination with the European Central Bank and International Monetary Fund (IMF), is preparing to roll out central bank digital currencies. This will prove to be the globalist elite greatest feat of its transition to the “cashless” economy, i.e., the “Mark” of the Beast.

The globalist IMF recently called for a new “Bretton Woods Moment” to address the loss of trillions of dollars in global economic output due to the coronavirus. The pressure is on with such intensity, the elite are risking everything on this transition phase. They know well it’s all or nothing at this point.

In the aftermath of World War II, the original Bretton Woods agreement established a world monetary order with the U.S. dollar as the reserve currency. It worked rather well until the Nixon administration took the country off the gold standard, thus opening up an inflationary period caused by out-of-control government spending.

Importantly, the dollar was to be pegged to the price of gold. Foreign governments and central banks could also redeem their dollar reserves in gold, and they started doing so in earnest in the 1960s and early 1970s.

In 1971, President Richard Nixon closed the gold window, effectively ushering in a new world monetary order based solely on the full faith and credit of the United States. An inflation crisis followed a few years later.

In response, the Federal Reserve took the painful step of jacking up interest rates to defend its wilting Federal Reserve Note and tame rising prices.

Fast forward to 2020, and the Fed has assumed for itself novel policy mandates that are a precursor to a new monetary system. But the monetary masters aren't contemplating a return to sound money. Rather, they're planning for even more debt, more inflation, and picking of winners and losers in the economy.

The Fed has unceremoniously thrown its statutory dual mandate of full employment and stable prices out the window. It now gives itself an unlimited mandate to inject stimulus and bailout cash wherever it sees fit (including, recently, "junk" bond exchange-traded funds).

Instead of pursuing stable prices, the Fed is now explicitly embarking on an inflation-raising campaign with the goal of generating annual price level increases above 2% for an undefined period.

The next frontier of the Fed's unlimited mandate could be "Fedcoin" – a central bank digital currency.

Earlier this month Chairman Powell participated in an IMF panel on international payments and digital currencies. He touted electronic payments systems and raised the possibility of integrating them into a central bank digital currency regime.

Powell has so far declined to outright endorse a move toward a fully cashless system which countries including China and Sweden are spearheading. But he is on board with the larger globalist agenda of expanding the role of monetary policy in shaping economic and social outcomes.

IMF Managing Director Kristalina Georgieva sees expanded monetary tools being aimed at every issue under the sun:

"We will have a chance to address some persistent problems – low productivity, slow growth, high inequalities, a looming climate crisis... We can do better than build back the pre-pandemic world – we can build forward to a world that is more resilient, sustainable, and inclusive."

The IMF is being pressured by debt campaigners to sell some of its gold reserves to cover payments owed by some of the world's poorest countries. The IMF would issue pseudo-currency units known as Special Drawing Rights (SDRs) to cancel the debts of poor countries. In a world where central bank balance sheets have grown by more than $7 trillion, it's not surprising that everyone wants a piece of the pie and that many now view gold as dispensable. Is gold merely a barbarous relic in this brave new digital world? If it were, then it would have collapsed in price this year, amid all the new central bank rollouts, instead of surging to an all-time high. Precious metals may be the ultimate hedge against the new world monetary order.

In the event that the U.S. central bank launches a digital dollar and assigns every American a virtual [cashless economy] wallet, there would be no escaping adverse monetary policy decrees except by exiting fiat currencies entirely. Under a central bank digital currency, authorities could impose negative interest rates on all holdings of currency units.

They could do so without needing to get anyone to buy negative-yielding bonds or deposit money into negative-yielding bank accounts. Under a central bank digital currency, direct credits and debits could replace stimulus checks and taxes.

It would be the vehicle through which modern monetary theory could be fully implemented – with the central bank becoming tax collector and funder of all government operations. Under such a system constitutional government would be a joke. A currency's store of value [purchase power] would likely follow the path of the Deutsch Mark of the 1930s.

If depreciating the value of the currency through the inflation tax wasn't enough, the Fed could also stick dollar-holders with a direct tax in the form of negative interest rates. Once paper notes are phased out, holding cash itself would no longer be a way for individuals to escape negative rates.

The only escape hatches would be volatile alternative digital currencies (such as Bitcoin) or hard money (gold and silver). Under a monetary order where electronic digits representing currency can be created out of thin air in unlimited quantities, the best hedge is the opposite – tangible, scarce, untraceable wealth held off the financial grid. We are viewing a preview in our understanding of how the world elite manipulate and plan to steal the wealth of people around the world. They will take it all in this period just ahead, which pictures the Antichrist System that begins the Great Tribulation. If you are a Christian believer, hang on a while longer, we are not far from the Blessed Hope!

Blessings,
