Covid Vaccines Appear to Install a “MAC Address” Inside the Vaxxed

Dr. Luis De Benito shares an advance of his report on the MAC Address phenomenon in inoculated individuals.

Dr. Luis Miguel De Benito, a digestive physician with a PhD in molecular biology, presents an excerpt of the research on the mysterious MAC addresses detected in vaccinated individuals with Bluetooth applications.

It's a brief report that he has sent to different research teams worldwide and will be released in its entirety on the 31st of this month. [Dr. De Benito posted this in November of 2021.]

In this short preview, Dr. De Benito explains what he has observed and what could be the possible causes of this phenomenon.

Orwell City brings the summary of his presentation below.

“I’m going to tell you today the findings of this summer, which go along the lines of what may be behind this entire attempt to vaccinate.

Why so much interest in jabbing? What's the reason? I'm going to tell you.

The international organizations that are also investigating this matter asked me for a brief report on what I had done during the summer. And I'm going to read it to you as it is. I'm going to make glosses of what I'm saying. But this is what I've written to them. And the different teams that are investigating this are seeing what part of it is right and what part is not. They're translating it into several languages. I say this because, probably, by the 31st it's going to be made public in other places or whatever.

It's been hard for me to get here to read it. Do you know why? Because it does weigh a little bit the fact of taking out of the medical issue. All this, you know, started as a channel to discuss the evolution of the pandemic, the affected, the treatments, and the virus, how the ICUs were. Well, and this no longer makes sense. All that's part of the past. And now, what we're going to is recognition of a desire, on the part of the authorities, to take away freedoms from human beings.

I don't care if you think I'm raving or not. But as I have a moral obligation to report what I have done, I tell you today. And whoever wants to believe it will believe it, and whoever doesn't will judge, criticize and compare it. As I say, I've written it, and I have already sent it to the teams that are studying this subject in different parts of the world.

If from the medical point of view there's no need to administer any preventive measure for a disease with the lethality of 2 per thousand, why so much insistence that everyone should be inoculated? What's the vaccine going to give me that I don't already have? Well, this experiment arose from this reflection.

Although there are many consultations, during the summer of 2021, in the afternoons, I was the only operative. There wasn't even administrative staff in the afternoons in that building. Under my office, I occasionally parked an ambulance from SUMA, from the emergency service, because they have a base there. Those were the only "interferences" I detected. Most of the observations were carried out without that artifact. I started the consultation at 15:00 and had patients listed every 20 minutes.

Due to COVID measures, it was recommended that they come alone and, if possible, at the appointed time. Not before or after. Before starting the consultation, I'd connect the Bluetooth application on my cell phone and invariably check that there was no device available to contact. There was no electronic device in range to connect to. When a patient appeared, often already up the stairs or at the beginning of the corridor, about 20 meters away from the practice, on my cell phone, I could see if one or two devices to connect to with Bluetooth appeared. One or two or none.

On my phone, I could check to see if the Bluetooth was detecting something or nothing. And if it was something, it was a device with a MAC Address (Media Access Control) code. This is a unique identifier that electronic device manufacturers assign to a card or item that can be networked.

After attending to the patient's medical requirements, I'd ask him whether or not he had been vaccinated for COVID. If the answer was affirmative, it was usually quick and without hesitation. And if it was negative, it was often accompanied by certain wariness, if not anger at the question. A reaction that explained to me that, in general, those who hadn't wanted to be vaccinated had been subjected to some kind of adverse social situation. After reassuring the patient, whatever his response, I'd write down on a sheet of paper the answer he gave me.

None of the 137 patients I asked refused to answer. If the answer was affirmative, I'd ask them what type of vaccine they had received, when, and if they had had any adverse reactions. I'd then ask them if they had any cell phones or electronic devices such as wireless headsets or tablets on them, and if so, I'd ask them to turn it off for a moment. When they turned it off, on my cell phone, usually, one of the devices that registered to Bluetooth would disappear.

Out of hundreds Here are the results.

Of the 137 patients questioned, 112 said they had been vaccinated, and 25 said they hadn't been vaccinated. None of the patients who said they hadn't been vaccinated registered on my cell phone any device available for Bluetooth connection, having ensured the disconnection of their cell phone, if they had one. In 96 patients of the 112 who said they had been vaccinated, 96 of the 112 having switched off their electronic devices if they were carrying them, a MAC code remained on the screen of my cell phone, which I had already noted in my notes next to the patient's medical history.

I interpreted that it was a code that the patient himself was carrying and that, in fact, when he left the office, leaving the building, it disappeared from my cell phone. With this simple observation throughout July and August, I've been able to verify that 100% of the patients who say they aren't vaccinated don't raise any contact device with my cell phone via Bluetooth. But 86% of those who said they were vaccinated generated a MAC Address on my cell phone. These are the observations made, and many doubts and questions arise from them.

Among them, the ones that seem to me be the most significant are

- 1. First, does the signal detected on my cell phone come from the vaccinated person? Well, precisely the isolated environment and not being interfered with by other signals has meant that there's no other source of contamination. In fact, when the SUMA ambulance arrived, apart from other devices such as "SUMA base" and several MAC addresses that I attributed to ambulance personnel who could be vaccinated, I noticed that these signals disappeared when the ambulance left. And when there were suspicions about whether there was some other distorting element, for example, patient escorts in the corridor, accidental operators in the corridor that could be the source or origin of other markers, then I dismissed that case. It's not within the 137 that I have confirmed.*

2. Second, do all cell phones detect Bluetooth devices with equal capability? My answer is no. My experience is that they don't.
3. Third, does the detectable MAC Address on a person allow interaction with him? To what extent? At least I'm sure of one thing: it allows me to know where he is because I knew that someone vaccinated was coming to my office before he showed up.
4. The fourth question I asked myself: If the MAC Address is something personal, individual, and unrepeatable, how is it possible that the five people who were injected with the contents of the same vial, from the same distribution of the same batch, don't have 5 different MAC Addresses? Well, I consulted with some computer technicians, roboticists and fellow biologists and engineers, experts in computer science, and nanorobotics. And they advocate the possibility that this code is generated as a result of the interaction of what's injected with the genetic material of the patient. Perhaps not so much with their DNA as with the larger compatibility complex, the HLA's, which are ultimately derived from the genome.

So if the MAC address is generated by the vaccine, why do only 86% of those who claim to be vaccinated have it? Different answers have been considered to answer this question.

1. The first one: some of the vials could be placebo.
2. Second: some vials could be denatured.
3. Third: a lack of response. In other words, the expected results are not always obtained when a product is applied.
4. And the fourth, which seems very important to me, is because the patient lies and says he is vaccinated when he isn't to avoid problems or controversies.

I have many doubts. These are the findings that I've made. They're outside my medical knowledge. I simply attest that when you're in consultation with a person in an isolated environment, that comes up on my cell phone. What does it mean? I have no idea. But I don't like it."

HENRY MAKOW: “The Jabbed Are Connected To Bluetooth Through Their Personal ‘666 Mark Of The Beast’ Microchip ‘Certificate Of Vaccination ID’ \(COVID\) Barcode”

A reader's message to Henry Makow, PhD @ HenryMakow.com from 'JS':

Henry,
Here are a dozen smartphone screenshots I took Monday in front of a supermarket in Germany.

It looks like the inoculated are all having their own individual (kind of) IP address which appears on the screen when Bluetooth is being activated and scans the surrounding for reachable Bluetooth devices.

As you can see I did that for five minutes and the digits change with the ongoing stream of pedestrians and vehicles. The addresses all have the same format. Twelve digits separated by colon, a mix of numbers and alphabetic characters.

This is definitely not how a reachable Bluetooth device looks like on the screen. Normally you get the name of the device and a symbol that shows what kind of device, e.g. headset, phone, car wifi etc.

The more people are around the more numbers appearing and the list changes from second to second.

I'm not a pro but I know a little bit about computers and I have never seen anything like that before.

My web research resulted in absolutely nothing except some others who noticed the same phenomenon. The fact that the numbers change with the people passing by only makes sense when these people themselves are the devices.

If true, everybody with a smartphone (except iPhone) can see with his own eyes now what the whole C-agenda is about. Everybody can check this by himself. Even the inoculated non-believers can go to the woods or elsewhere where they are alone and try it out. The same number they always see on their screen no matter when they look at it is their own mark-of-the-beast-number.

Seems like tptb created this whole C-scenario amongst others to get everybody injected with a jab that contains graphene oxide and that self-assembles (this ability is one of graphene oxides characteristics) in the body to some kind of artificial nervous system which connects the person to the smart grid either directly via 5G or via the persons smartphone.

And I suppose this is only one aspect of the evil potential of the jab.

First Comment from Ken Adachi:

Everyone who receives the Covid Death Jab is hooked up to "The Internet of Things" immediately following his first Jab. It's now known that ALL Covid Death Jabs contain Graphene Oxide which is creating the signal being transmitted and registering on that Blue Tooth reader. Dr. Carrie Madej explained this AI/Vaxxed "hookup" in great detail in a video that she posted to YouTube on August 17, 2020 (and I re-posted to my Bitchute channel on Sep. 11, 2020).

<https://www.bitchute.com/video/o5p9D7Vo72WY/>

The AI/Vaxxed “hookup” was later revealed by a Russian hacker in May of 2021 when he hacked into the computer system that was listing all of the Bio-metrics and ID data on the Russian people who got injected with the Sputnik Jab and zeroed in on the data being transmitted by one of his friend who got the Death Jab. Here’s the video, which I just uploaded tonight while typing these comments, so you can verify the info for yourself (narration in Russian, but translated into English subtitles)

<https://www.bitchute.com/video/ZtqeBP6WTYqS/>

Response from WB:

Henry, concerning the MAC codes... I’m a retired federal IT Specialist.

These numbers are definitely in a MAC address format, except for one thing. In a true MAC address the first six hexadecimal characters ALWAYS identify the manufacturer of the device (they will always be the same based on a set manufacturer code) and the last six identify the device itself (such as a network card in a computer... they are UNIQUE based on each device).

So, In this case all 48 binary numbers (each hex number represents four 1’s or 0’s) seem to be identifying a single person. IF this was just reading cell phones (which I don’t believe it is) then you would see the first six hex characters repeating somewhat as to manufacturer... as there’s only a limited number of manufacturers in the world...the last six however would be totally different for each phone).

Definitely appears that EACH INDIVIDUAL is identified with a 12-bit hexadecimal number.

From JS Tuesday-

Ok, I’m just back from another trial with a family member’s smartphone. Same procedure same outcome. I can only repeat myself: Yes, every network device has its own worldwide unique MAC address. But when connected the device is NOT being displayed by its MAC address but by its name (i.e. see the attached screenshot > headset, sound system). How else could one find a desired device in case of connecting? Everybody would have to know the MAC addresses of his devices by rote. And if it wasn’t the people walking by themselves who are the devices but their smartphones, headsets etc. – where are the symbols? Since when are devices displayed on a user interface by their MAC address and not by their names/symbols?

I would just like to ask everybody with a smartphone to go to a place with numerous people and try it out himself.

From JS Wednesday:

“Is it possible you are picking up their phones?”

No, I don’t think so.

1. I know what a MAC address is, but my phone never showed any and I don’t know how this should be possible. Would have to be a very peculiar bug in the software or flaw in the hardware if the phone was kaput. It's five years old but running reliably. No problems at all.

2. If it was a bug or a flaw it would have to show this behavior with every device in the closer surrounding, but it doesn't. I only know and have contact with unvaxxed (don't ask me now how I manage to do that) and they all have smartphones too. And of course I tried it out yesterday and today – nothing! No 'MAC' addresses from their devices. No joke. I'm more and more certain that it's the vaxxed who are tagged. By the way I find it logical that this human IPs are also formatted like MAC addresses. It's the IoT and the IoB (internet of bodies, like they announced it a couple of years ago).

Another country announces it will require its citizens to accept biometric digital IDs

The momentum continues to build for a global digitalized system that will be the final control grid -- marking, tracking and monitoring the movement all things, living and non-living.

LEO HOHMANN

MAR 11, 2024

Another country, Nepal, has just announced it will submit to the global beast system and digitally mark all of its citizens starting at birth.

I've reported on similar moves in many other countries including Australia, the E.U., Ghana, and China, all characterized by a biometric digital ID. The United Nations itself is organizing a global effort to digitally register all births worldwide.

Now, the government of Nepal will required the digital identity of its citizens as it starts assigning them digital ID numbers at birth. This is the so-called "birth registration" that I've been warning about for years as it was included in the United Nations Agenda 2030 document signed in 2015 by more than 190 heads of state, including Barack Obama, as part of its "sustainable development goals." I knew early on that the "legal identity" and "birth registration" required by the UN system would be digital, even though the word "digital" did not appear in the original document.

As reported by the Nepal newspaper, The Kathmandu Post, the Department of National ID and Civil Registration has started issuing digital numbers to pave the way for wider adoption of the national digital identity cards.

Nepal's national ID is a federal identity card issued by the Department of National ID and Civil Registration with a unique number assigned to each person when their birth is registered by the state. Nepali citizens will obtain the cards based on their biometric and demographic data. The card features a unique number, photo, personal information and the bearer's fingerprints.

The department claims that the biometric "smart card" will have several uses and that officials can read it using secure terminals.

Mukesh Kumar Keshar, the director at Nepal's Department of National ID and Civil Registration, said:

"We have been informally providing national ID numbers to people at their birth registration across the country for the past two months. Such numbers are being given to around 2,000 people a day. When a person's identity is created from early childhood, it will be easier for such persons to get government documents, including the national ID."

Goal 16.9 of the UN Agenda 2030 calls for a “legal identity for all, including birth registration, by 2030.” The UN says on its website the digital registration of all persons “is key to advance the 2030 Agenda commitment to leave no one behind.”

Let that sink in. They are telling us that, according to their vision, no person on planet Earth will be left behind, meaning all will be required to participate in the beast system. They will be numbered, and have their movement and behaviors tracked and monitored 24/7. This will be so they can track and assess your carbon footprint, among other things.

Nepal will formally launch its digital identity program within a few weeks.

Along with the initiative, the government plans to speed up the national ID card distribution.

The government issued the national ID card in 2018. In November that year, then-home minister Ram Thapa launched the distribution of national identity cards in Panchthar district. It was done as part of a pilot program funded by the Asian Development Bank to distribute digital identification cards in the eastern district.

These things always start with a pilot program, then get made permanent, then get mandated.

It's only a matter of time until the United States rolls out a similar digital ID plan. In fact, a bill has already been introduced in the U.S. Senate to do exactly that. Interesting how no politician, including Donald Trump, talks about this.

Turbo Cancers Are Skyrocketing Among Fully Vaxxed Young People, Pathologist Warns

Hunter Fielding March 11, 2024

A leading pathologist is raising the alarm after finding that turbo cancers are now skyrocketing among fully vaccinated young people aged 15 to 59 years old.

Croatian pathologist Ivana Pavic warns that all of the patients she is diagnosing with turbo cancers have received multiple doses of Covid mRNA vaccines.

According to Pavic, these mRNA injections are causing rapidly spreading cancers to form in otherwise healthy young people.

Pavic spoke with investigator Steve Kirsch recently about a disturbing phenomenon she is observing in people who got “vaccinated” for Covid.

A leading pathologist is raising the alarm after finding that turbo cancers are now skyrocketing among fully vaccinated young people aged 15 to 59 years old.

Croatian pathologist Ivana Pavic warns that all of the patients she is diagnosing with turbo cancers have received multiple doses of Covid mRNA vaccines.

According to Pavic, these mRNA injections are causing rapidly spreading cancers to form in otherwise healthy young people.

Pavic spoke with investigator Steve Kirsch recently about a disturbing phenomenon she is observing in people who got “vaccinated” for Covid.

According to Pavic, 65 percent of all carcinoma cases among people aged 15 through 59 received one or more injections for Covid, with a 55 percent vaccination rate overall in the same age group.

Calculated out, this means that every Covid injection increases one’s risk of this particular form of cancer by 52 percent, something that was not disclosed when the shots were pushed through Operation Warp Speed.

Kirsch interviewed Pavic about the matter and you can watch that interview below.

WATCH:

Pathologist Ivana Pavic \(Croatia\) reveals vax increased your cancer risk by 52%

Kirsch likes to really spell out how he makes his calculations. And in this case, he presented a simple visual involving 100 people, 55 of whom are vaccinated and 45 of whom are not.

If the cancer risk in both groups is, say, 10 percent, you would have 5.5 and 4.5 with 55 percent vaccinated.

“To get to a 65% ratio, it would mean that more vaxxed people got cancer: 8.342 people,” Kirsch further explains.

Covid Shots Cause Long-Term Kidney Damage, Study Finds

Hunter Fielding March 11, 2024

The damning new study has uncovered troubling evidence showing that Covid mRNA shots cause long-term kidney failure and renal damage. The heart-related dangers of COVID-19 vaccines are very well-known at this point.

However, new impacts of the injections are continuing to emerge that are being widely ignored by the corporate media.

According to Dr. Peter A. McCullough, an epidemiologist, cardiologist, and internist, a worrying number of kidney and renal effects are being reported in connection with the vaccine.

McCullough fears that it may be overlooked to the point where these problems are not discovered in patients until it is too late to intervene. He notes that kidneys receive a quarter of all cardiac output and filter blood on a regular basis.

With studies showing that around half of vaccinated individuals have detectable levels of the COVID-19 vaccine spike protein in their bloodstream, it is not a stretch to posit that the spike protein and mRNA could end up settling within the kidneys and causing an expression of the spike protein there.

A scientific review outlined 28 published mechanisms of renal damage and kidney injury stemming from the jabs, with most pathways related to inflammation from autoimmunity or direct cytokine damage. This dovetails with a paper that was published on a preprint server last year by scientists from the New Zealand Ministry of Health that showed the vaccine causes kidney injury.

Interestingly, the paper somehow managed to “disappear” from the preprint server before popping up again later in the year in a peer-reviewed journal with some numbers changed to reframe the jab as safe for kidneys.

In an examination of VAERS database information, Steve Kirsch found that just one vaccine in the database’s 30-year history had a signal for acute kidney injury – and it was indeed the COVID-19 vaccine.

Doctors are too afraid to admit the vaccines cause damage

The problem is that many in the medical establishment are so fearful of admitting that the vaccines can cause any damage that they aren’t giving the possibility the weight it deserves.

After being threatened with losing their license, many physicians are hesitant to even suggest something could be wrong with a patient after getting jabbed. As a result, people may not be getting the tests and treatments they need.

This is something that Dr. McCullough, who is an expert in complications caused by the COVID-19 vaccine and the virus itself, is worried about.

He said that with so many people experiencing “pressing medical problems” such as blood clots, cardiac arrest, myocarditis, and stroke, renal damage might be discovered when it is too late to treat it.

South Korean researchers who explored new-onset kidney diseases following COVID-19 vaccination expressed a similar sentiment.

They looked at cases of people without a history of kidney-related problems who sought medical care following symptoms that arose after COVID-19 vaccination, such as red urine, acute kidney injury, and decreased renal function.

The study was not controlled, which means they cannot conclusively determine causality.

But they did caution: “However, COVID-19 vaccines are known to cause new-onset or relapsing glomerular diseases due to potent immune dysregulation, and various therapeutic responses have been reported.”

In the conclusion of their study, which was published in the journal Vaccines, they wrote:

“Although we could not confirm causality between vaccinations and these phenomena, in this time of mass vaccination, clinicians need to consider the possibility that vaccines may have provoked kidney diseases in patients who have renal symptoms.”

If healthcare providers aren't allowed to talk about vaccine side effects, they won't be able to monitor people or identify the causes of their problems so they can provide effective solutions.

The damage has already been done by forcing untested vaccines on people, but now it's time to acknowledge the very real adverse effects so doctors can be fully informed and help their patients get the treatment they need without fear of professional repercussions.

[It has been my analysis that Covid-19 vaxxes are a global elitist eugenics program to “Depopulate” the planet. I have read literally thousands of documents, reports, and exposes that clearly confirm this is sanctioned mass murder. Furthermore, Donald J. Trump has never admitted to his “huge” mistake to endorse his “Warp Speed” plan in 2020. Trump is either naïve, stupid, or in on the plan to “Depopulate” the world. Morally and ethically there is no basis for voting for DJT. He is not the Savior that much of the population seems to think and believe. That day has passed and the nation is in the final throws of its demise. We are no longer a nation of “Law and Order!” Trump just endorsed a former Congressman Mike Rogers who is a full-blown RINO. He's a NeoCon. He's part of the Romney/Cheney wing of the Republican Establishment. And perhaps most importantly, he's a self-avowed Never Trumper. As Senator Rand Paul noted on Twitter, Donald Trump's endorsement of Rogers for U.S. Senator in the Michigan race is like endorsing John Bolton.

@MikeRogersForMI is a never Trumper, and a card carrying member of the spy state that seeks to destroy Trump. You have to ask yourself who gives Trump this awful advice? Who's next, John Bolton? The question is, "Why?" The answer is, sadly, pretty obvious.”

When it comes to backroom deals, Trump is among the best at getting the upper hand. Unfortunately, that means that he's willing to do things his base doesn't like if it means achieving a goal. Right now, the goal is to be President of the United States and he (or at least his team) believes engaging with the UniParty Swamp is the best way to achieve this goal.

The Demon-crats have destroyed this nation and what has been referred to as the Great American Experiment. The great American experiment is a term that refers to the process of creating a modern republican nation based on the principles of democracy and divided powers. The term was coined by the French writer Tocqueville, who observed the birth of democracy in America after the American Revolution. The experiment was considered revolutionary and unprecedented at the time, as it challenged the traditional models of monarchy and aristocracy.

We have long been devolving as a Constitutional Republic and will soon return to Neo-Feudalism and few people see it coming. The events of COP28 at Dubai in December, 2023 synchronized HRH Prince Charles' agenda of saving the planet through a Net Zero Carbon in "seven" years. His control over the U.S. Uniparty is firmly in place.]

Why Biden's Actions Toward Israel Place America On Dangerous Ground With God

By Jonathan Brenther
March 5, 2024

In the past several weeks, President Biden has also been at the forefront of demanding that Israel accept a two-state solution as a way of appeasing the Palestinians. In other words, he would reward Hamas' barbarism by giving them land that rightfully belongs to Israel. Not only that, but his proposal would also give Israel's enemies a strategic position to accomplish their true intent, which is the destruction of the Jewish state and the murder of the Israelites who dwell there.

A couple of weeks ago, the U.S. vetoed a resolution calling for an immediate ceasefire in Gaza. Please don't be fooled by this empty show of support for Israel. The current U.S. leadership is no friend of Israel or the Jewish people. Biden's recommendations, if followed, would seriously degrade the security of Israel as well as the safety of its people.

The actions of the Biden Administration toward Israel place America on dangerous ground for the following reasons:

They Will bring God's Curse Upon Our Nation

The U.S. President and Secretary of State Blinken appear determined to stop Israel from achieving an all-out victory in its war with Hamas. Though they would never admit such a thing, their proposals would provide Hamas with a tactical victory as well as a position of strength in negotiating the release of hostages that it has not already murdered.

Because Israel still represents God's chosen people (see Romans 11:1-2), the warning of Genesis 12:3 remains in effect: "And I will bless them that bless thee, and curse him that curseth thee: and in thee shall all families of the earth be blessed."

The Hebrew word for "dishonors you," or "curseth you" in the KJV, is translated in a variety of ways in the Old Testament. In this context, it signifies those who would treat Israel with contempt and dishonor. It's the act of treating something "lightly" in the sense of placing little importance upon it.

The word for "I will curse," speaking in regard to God's response to those who treat His people with disdain, is different and signifies what we understand as a curse, or in this case, a judgment on those who would treat Israel with derision such as the Biden Administration.

If the words of Genesis 12:3 still apply to God's covenant with Abraham, which He reiterated to the descendants of Jacob (Psalm 105:7-11), and they do, the actions of the Biden administration will surely bring a curse upon himself as well as upon the nation.

His Proposal to Divide God's Land Will Surely Bring God's Wrath

As I have written before, and include here for completeness, Scripture makes it clear that those who attempt to divide God's Land in the last days will incur His wrath.

The prophet Joel reveals that God's wrath against the nations at the end of the Tribulation will stem from their desire to divide "my land":

(Joel 3:1-3 KJV) – "For, behold, in those days, and in that time, when I shall bring again the captivity of Judah and Jerusalem, I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them there for my people and for my heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations, and parted my land. And they have cast lots for my people; and have given a boy for an harlot, and sold a girl for wine, that they might drink."

The actions of President Biden and his administration will surely bring God's wrath upon the United States.

One of the key signs of judgments that will overflow the earth during the "day of the Lord" that the prophet Joel writes about is a darkening of the sun: "The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and terrible day of the Lord come."

Jesus, in describing His return to earth after the judgments of the Tribulation period, also mentioned the darkening of the sun that will happen at His Second Coming.

Although the April 8, 2024, solar eclipse is not the darkening of the sun that will happen at the end of this age, I cannot escape the thought that it symbolizes the terrors that lie ahead for planet Earth.

I also believe it's a warning to America as it occurs in connection with Biden's push to divide God's land and the contempt that the U.S. president is displaying toward Israel's leadership by seeking to impose ceasefires in Gaza that interfere with their goal of defeating Hamas.

As the April 8 eclipse is garnering unprecedented interest for such an event, it occurs to me that the Lord might be causing this rabid attention. Could this be the Lord's way of drawing attention to His warning of judgment? I think so.

A family member from the Dallas area recently told me that hotels in the area are selling out for the event. Delta offered a flight from Austin to Detroit for the sole purpose of giving people an opportunity to view the darkening of the sun from the air, and people quickly purchased all the tickets for it.

Please know I'm not setting dates, but I cannot ignore the warning that's happening at a time when the U.S. is not only steeped in great wickedness and government corruption that goes far beyond the limits of our imagination but also promoting policies toward Israel that the Bible says will surely result in the outpouring of God's wrath on any nation that behaves in such a way.

Regardless of what the April 8 solar eclipse signifies regarding our future, America truly rests on dangerous ground as its leaders treat Israel with great contempt and seek to divide God's Land.

Tel Aviv will soon have a very substantial addition to its skyline – a fourth Azrieli Center tower, this time in the shape of a spiral, to join the city's landmark trio of buildings. Once completed, it is set to be the tallest tower in Israel.

Well now, this is interesting. Construction work has begun on what will be the tallest building in Israel, part of the Azrieli Center in Tel Aviv. The building looks stunningly like a 21st century version of the Tower of Babel from the bible, with the price tag coming in right around $666 million dollars, approximately. Even more interesting is the logo of the Azrieli Group with its large, Masonic capital "G" that intersects with a pyramid topped with a blue capstone. All that's missing is the number "33" to make the imagery complete. So what to make of all this?

"Therefore is the name of it called Babel; because the LORD did there confound the language of all the earth: and from thence did the LORD scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth." -(Genesis 11:9)

OK, so it looks like the Tower of Babel, has 91 floors (9/11??), it costs right around $666 million dollars, and the Azrieli Group has a crazy creepy Illuminati and Masonic-themed logo. Hmm. I guess all I can do is put it in a big, fat 'prophecy pile' together with Mike Pompeo's teasing of a rebuilt Temple in Jerusalem and Jared Kushner, who owns a building at 666 Fifth Ave, that was financed by George Soros, preparing to implement a 'new and different' Middle East peace plan. Is this for real, or did I swallow a 'Left Behind' novel for breakfast this morning?

Things are speeding up quickly now, people, pay close attention or you're going to miss it.

Tel Aviv to Add Fourth Azrieli Center Tower; Will Be Tallest Building in Israel

FROM THE TOWER: The 91-story spiral tower will be almost 1,150 feet (350 meters) tall and will include commercial, office and residential areas as well as a hotel. The top floors are to house conference rooms, spaces for meetings and entertainment and a 360-degree lookout. A garden and chef restaurant will be on the roof.

Digging and piling work is already underway, and construction is expected to be completed within six or seven years. The total cost of the project is estimated at ₪2.5 billion (over $650 million).

"The architecture of the spiral tower reflects the boldness and creativity of the Azrieli Group, which redefines Tel Aviv's skyline with each new project," Azrieli Group Chairwoman Dana Azrieli said at the project's unveiling on Wednesday.

"The tower was planned and developed in a unique geometric shape, never before seen in Israel, which captures the eye and the imagination. The main challenge for the initiators and architects was to create harmony between the three iconic towers that form Azrieli Center and the new tower, an impressive, one-of-a-kind structure which stands on its own. The tower's design takes inspiration from the twists of a snail's shell, attempting to imitate their natural form. The design also draws inspiration from ancient biblical scrolls and the way they unfurl upwards."* – KPF

"The exceptional financial investment in the project is a testament to our great confidence in the Israeli economy and its growth, and continues the strategy that has led us in building the country for over three decades," she said.

The spiral tower was designed by the American Kohn Pedersen Fox architecture firm, which has designed five out of the 10 tallest skyscrapers in the world. Israeli firm Moshe Tzur Architects & Town Planners is working with KDF on the project.

The tower's spiral shape, according to its planners, draws inspiration from the curves of a snail shell. Biblical scrolls were another source of inspiration. Once completed, the new building will unfurl dramatically above the existing circular, triangular and square-shaped Azrieli Center buildings. Those three 50-story buildings, which include a shopping mall, commercial and office space, were completed between 1998 and 2007.

The new tower will expand the Azrieli Center footprint by almost three acres, for a total area of more than 12 acres. The complex will constitute a major transportation hub, connecting the existing Hashalom railway station with the light-rail network now under construction in the Tel Aviv district, as well as the many bus lines.

Some 100,000 people are expected to pass through the expanded center every day.

Is America too far gone to be saved?

Pastor Jeff Crippen

“In the decade between 1730 and 1740, the life of England was foul with moral corruption and crippled by spiritual decay.... Nowhere was the nation’s weakness more evident than in the Gin Craze. Within a generation of the prohibition of 1689 of the importation of liquor, Englishmen began to brew their own. Within a generation, every sixth house in London had become a gin shop.” [The Life and Times of George Whitefield, Arnold Dallimore, Banner of Truth Press]

There are remarkable parallels between England in those days and America in our own time. Lest anyone think that something like gin [or the drugs of our day] could be so serious a threat to a nation, listen to people who lived in those times describe it:

“Gin has made the English people what they never were before – cruel and inhuman. From almost every aspect of British life there arises evidence that an unwonted heartlessness had come over the nation. Sports which indulged in cruelty to animals had once been prohibited, but in the days of gin men once again found pleasure in torturing beasts and people had become so callous that they could look on suffering and delight in it.” [Ibid]

And that is not all. Dallimore’s research revealed even more frightening results of this addict-fueled craze:

England’s upper class was characterized by inhumanity. Their “polite thievery” and conspiracies for political power were rampant.

Years of indulgence to the drug of gin enlarged the numbers of the poor. Unable or unwilling to work, seeking only the temporary “peace” gin could give, the crowds of these people swelled. So much so that the usual poor tax could no longer provide for them adequately.

“Fever-laden haunts of vice and wretchedness existed in alleys and lanes filled with tumble-down houses, airless courts crowded with quarreling women and naked children.” [Ibid]

Lawlessness and violence inevitably increased at an alarming rate. Increases in the severity of punishment, including hanging for over 100 kinds of offenses, failed to stem the tide.

The printed page (i.e., the media) became corrupt and promoted the very evils which were destroying England. “Mercenary wretches, void of shame, published for the sake of a paltry present gain, propagating their poison to posterity.” [Ibid]

It does not require any stretching of imagination to recognize that these very descriptions of a day so long ago – were not so long ago after all. These things are here with us. The parallels are obvious:

> Violence and lawlessness increasing exponentially.

> Homeless camps filled with squalor, fueled by the addictions to drugs and alcohol, are to be found in our major cities. Perhaps it is too restrictive to use the limiting adjective “major.” The small town we live in has these very kinds of camps as well populated by people who are either unable or unwilling to work.

> And then there are the drugs. Here in Oregon, the insanity of legalizing drugs has proven itself to be, well, insanity. Efforts to repeal these lawless laws are underway. Marijuana vendors are – what is the word? – ubiquitous. One-time dairy farms are now producing cannabis instead of milk. In a nearby small town, the building that once was the police station is now a marijuana store. A friend owns a small grocery store in our community and informs me that he is shocked at how many people come to his store and reek of “the weed.” Then they get in their cars and drive on the highways where we travel.

> The United States does not have a formal “nobility” class like England, but we certainly have an informal one. Most of its main players are to be found in the halls of our federal government, where, as in England of old, they grow wealthier and wealthier through legal illegalities. They are characterized by an astonishing mindset of entitlement and superiority. A leading example, of course, sits in the Oval Office.

These, then, are the gin-craze days revived. Is there no hope? Are we too far gone? How was it that England was saved in those days nearly three centuries ago?

Well, to cite Dallimore once again, this is what happened:

“The love of righteousness – a legacy from the Reformation and more particularly from the Puritan age [Note: don’t readily believe the typical lying bad press given to the Puritans]...the love of righteousness still existed in many a heart throughout the nation, and England was not lacking in hundreds – probably thousands – who refused to bow the knee to Baal.” [Ibid]

That last phrase about Baal is drawn from the Old Testament account of a time when Israel was ruled by the tyrant Jezebel. She demanded, upon pain of death, that everyone bow to her false god, Baal. Baal worship even entailed sacrificing children to this demon idol.

This remnant of righteousness-loving people worked against the tide of evil to establish hospitals, expose the terrors and squalor of English prisons, legislate against the drug of the day (gin), establish schools for the poor at no cost, and work to “promote Christian knowledge” in the nation.

As much as these noble efforts helped, none of them were the real remedy to the evils of the day. A magistrate in London named Henry Fielding said in regard to the gin craze, “Should the drinking of this poison be continued at its present height during the next 20 years, there will by that time be very few of the common people left to drink it.” [Ibid]

So what was the solution? What saved England? What turned the tide? What is the remedy for our own nation and its present plight?

It was this: something which came to be known as the eighteenth-century revival. It began when a voice was suddenly heard sounding from a pulpit in the Church of England, and then sounding out in the open fields to thousands and thousands of the common people, ultimately reaching even into the palatial homes of the gentry. It was the voice of a man named George Whitefield, and that voice was shouting out the remedy, the only hope for the people and the nation.

What was it? What did George Whitefield preach? It was nothing new – though it sounded new because it had so long been neglected. It was what the Bible calls, the gospel of Jesus Christ. Whitefield preached this simple message which the Apostle Paul so long before called “the power of God to salvation for all who believe.” In essence, it is this, “Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and you will be saved.” Saved from what? From sin. From death. From the awful results of going our own way instead of God’s way. Saved from gin, from debauchery, from cruelty and greedy corruption. And ultimately, saved from hell.

As Whitefield put it over and over again, just as the Lord Jesus Christ said it to a Jewish rabbi long before, you must be born again. That was England’s only hope. It is America’s only hope as well.

US Debt Surging $10 Billion Per Day, $416 Million Per Hour, $6.94 Million Per Minute, $115,740 Per Second: US Treasury Department

America’s ever-increasing pile of debt is now growing at a stunning pace, according to new numbers from the U.S. Treasury.

The agency’s “debt to the penny” database shows the national debt is ballooning by about $1 trillion every 100 days.

That’s a staggering $10 billion per day, $416.67 million per hour, $6.94 million per minute and $115,740 per second.

America's total outstanding public debt now stands at $34.46 trillion – up from $34.39 trillion just one week ago.

The new data comes amid a warning from Wharton professor Joao Gomes, who tells Fortune that the spiraling debt could derail whoever wins the race for the White House.

“Toward the latter part of the decade we will have to deal with this. It could derail the next administration, frankly. If they come up with plans for large tax cuts or another big fiscal stimulus, the markets could rebel.

Interest rates could just spike right there, and we would have a crisis in 2025. It could very well happen. I'm very confident by the end of the decade one way or another, we will be there.”

Late last year, Moody's reduced its U.S. credit rating outlook from “stable” to “negative,” largely due to political gridlock in Congress.

“In Moody's view, such political polarization is likely to continue. As a result, building political consensus around a comprehensive, credible multi-year plan to arrest and reverse widening fiscal deficits through measures that would increase government revenue or reform entitlement spending appears extremely difficult.”

This week, President Biden fleshed out a proposal to reduce the debt by $3 trillion by boosting taxes on corporations and billionaires.

With Republicans currently in control of the House, the plan is unlikely to pass.

The US Economy Looks Good On Paper – Here's Why It's Actually A Disaster In Progress

March 12, 2024

This article was written by Brandon Smith and originally published at Birch Gold Group

One of my favorite false narratives floating around corporate media platforms has been the argument that the American people “just don't seem to understand how good the economy really is right now.” If only they would look at the stats, they would realize that we are in the middle of a financial renaissance, right? It must be that people have been brainwashed by negative press from conservative sources...

I have to laugh at this claim because it's a very common one throughout history – It's an assertion made by almost every single political regime right before a major collapse. These people always say the same things, and when you study economics as long as I have you can't help but throw up your hands and marvel at their dedication to the propaganda.

One example that comes to mind immediately is the delusional optimism of the "roaring" 1920s and the lead up to the Great Depression. At the time around 60% of the US population was living in poverty conditions (according to the metrics of the decade) earning less than $2000 a year. However, in the years after WWI ravaged Europe, America's economic power was considered unrivaled.

The 1920s was an era of mass production and rampant consumerism but it was all fueled by easy access to debt, a condition which had not really existed before in America. It was this illusion of prosperity created by the unchecked application of credit that eventually led to the massive stock market bubble and the crash of 1929. This implosion, along with the Federal Reserve's policy of raising interest rates into economic weakness, created a black hole in the US financial system for over a decade.

There are two primary tools that various failing regimes will always use to distort the true conditions of the economy: Debt and inflation. In the case of America today, we are experiencing BOTH problems simultaneously and this has made certain economic indicators appear healthy when they are, in fact, highly unstable. The average American knows this is the case because they see the effects daily. They see the damage to their wallets, to their buying power, in the jobs market and in their quality of life. This is why public faith in the economy has been stuck in the dregs since 2021.

The establishment can shove out-of-context stats in people's faces, but they can't force the populace to see a recovery that simply does not exist. Let's go through a short list of the most faulty indicators and the real reasons why the fiscal picture is not as rosy as the media would like us to believe...

The "Miracle" Labor Market Recovery

In the case of the U.S. labor market, we have a clear example of distortion through inflation. The $8 trillion+ dropped on the economy in the first 18 months of the pandemic response sent the system over the edge into stagflation land. Helicopter money has a habit of doing two things very well: Blowing up a bubble in stock markets and blowing up a bubble in retail. Hence, the massive rush by Americans to go out and buy, followed by the sudden labor shortage and the race to hire (mostly for low wage part-time jobs).

The problem with this "miracle" is that inflation leads to price explosions, which we have already experienced. The average American is spending around 30% more for goods, services and housing compared to what they were spending in 2020. This is what happens when you have too much fiat money chasing too few goods and limited production.

The jobs market looks great on paper, but the majority of jobs generated in the past few years are jobs that returned after the covid lockdowns ended (the same lockdowns Democrats tried to keep in place perpetually). The rest are jobs created through monetary stimulus, and then there is the issue of “immigrant jobs” and data that is revised to the negative months later. I suspect we won’t ever hear the real stats unless Trump enters office in 2025. Then the media discussion will focus intently on how terrible the labor market really is.

Part time low wage service sector jobs are not going to keep the country rolling for very long in a stagflation environment. The question is, what happens now that the stimulus punch bowl has been removed?

Just as we witnessed in the 1920s, Americans have turned to debt to make up for higher prices and stagnant wages by maxing out their credit cards to historic levels. With the central bank keeping interest rates high, the credit safety net will soon falter. This condition also goes for businesses; businesses that will soon jump headlong into mass layoffs when they realize the party is over. It happened during the Great Depression and it will happen again today.

Stock Market Bonanza

We saw cracks in the armor of the financial structure in 2023 with the spring banking crisis, and without the abrupt Federal Reserve backstop many more small and medium banks would have dropped dead. The weakness of U.S. banks is offset by the relative strength of the U.S. dollar, which lures in foreign investors hoping to protect their wealth using dollar denominated assets.

But something is amiss. Gold and Bitcoin have rocketed higher along with stocks and the dollar. This is the opposite of what’s supposed to happen. Gold and BC are supposed to be hedges against a weak dollar and weak equities, right? If global faith in the dollar and in stocks is so high, why are investors diving into protective assets like gold?

Again, as noted above, inflation distorts everything. Tens of trillions of extra dollars printed by the Fed are floating around and it’s no surprise that much of that cash is flooding into the stock market which simply pushes higher right along with prices on the shelf. But, gold and BC are telling us a more nuanced story about what’s really happening.

Right now, the U.S. government is adding around $1 Trillion every 100 days to the national debt as the Fed holds rates higher to fight inflation. Higher interest means exponential debt conditions, and this debt is going to crush America’s financial standing for global investors who will eventually ask HOW the U.S. is going to handle that growing millstone? As I predicted years ago, the Fed has created a perfect Catch-22 scenario in which the U.S. must either return to rampant inflation, or, face a debt breakdown. In either case, U.S. dollar denominated assets will lose their appeal and stock markets will ultimately plummet.

Beyond this reality, stocks are not a leading indicator of anything, let alone the stability of the financial system. Stocks are a trailing indicator; they crash well after all the other warning signals have made it obvious that something is wrong. Average Americans, for good reason, do not care what stock markets have to say.

Healthy GDP Is A Complete Farce

Beyond the stock market, GDP is the most common out-of-context stat used by governments to convince the citizenry that all is well. It is yet another stat that is entirely manipulated by inflation. It is also manipulated by the way in which modern governments define “production and market value.”

GDP is primarily driven by spending. Meaning, the higher inflation goes, the higher prices go, and the higher GDP climbs (to a point). Eventually prices go too high, credit cards tap out and spending ceases. But, for a short time inflation makes GDP (as well as retail) look good.

Another factor that creates a bubble is the reality that government spending is actually included in the calculation of GDP. That’s right, every dollar of your tax money that the government wastes helps the establishment by propping up GDP numbers. This is why government spending increases will never stop – It’s too valuable for them to spend as a way to make the economy appear healthier than it is.

The Real Economy Is Eclipsing The Fake Economy

The bottom line is that Americans used to be able to ignore the warning signs because their bank accounts were not being directly affected. This is over. Now, every person in the country is dealing with a massive decline in buying power and higher prices across the board in all assets. Even the wealthy are seeing a compression to their profits and many are struggling to keep their businesses in the black.

The unfortunate truth is that the elections of 2024 will probably be the turning point at which the whole edifice comes tumbling down. Even if the public votes for change, the system is already broken and cannot be repaired without a complete overhaul. We have consistently avoided taking our medicine and our weaknesses have only accumulated.

People have lost faith in the economy because they have not faced this kind of uncertainty since the 1930s. Even the stagflation crisis of the 1970s will likely pale in comparison to what is about to happen. On the bright side, at least a large number of Americans are aware of the threat, as opposed to the 1920s when the vast majority of people were utterly conned by the government, the banks and the media into thinking all was well. Knowing is the first step to preparing.

WEF Planning to ‘Relaunch’ Covid Pandemic, Insider Warns

A bioweapons industry insider has blown the whistle to warn the public that the World Economic Forum (WEF) is planning to “relaunch” the Covid pandemic in order to finalize its “Great Reset” agenda.

According to Dr. Harvey Risch, a bioweapons expert and Yale University professor and epidemiologist, the “next pandemic” is about to erupt “seemingly out of nowhere.”

Risch warns that globalist elites are not finished with Covid yet, despite the appearance that the pandemic is “over.”

While the last pandemic may have failed to fully usher in the WEF’s “Great Reset,” another, more deadly Covid outbreak would surely complete the transition.

Both the “virus,” so-called, and the “vaccine,” so-called, were the perfect excuse for America’s bioweapons industry to boost itself as something the nation requires in order to serve the public good by protecting We the People against disease – or so it claims.

Dr. Risch is now alerting top trusted lawmakers in the hope of blocking the plans.

At a recent roundtable meeting called “Federal Health Agencies and the COVID Cartel: What Are They Hiding?” hosted by Sen. Ron Johnson (R-WI), Dr. Risch explained more about how the bioweapons industry has been working in secret for at least the past 70 years to unleash hell on the world.

“This work and the WIV (Wuhan Institute of Virology in China) leak was what I consider to be the fruit of our bioweapons industry that has been performing secretive and nefarious biological weapons development for the last 70 years,” Dr. Risch stated at the roundtable.

"The recognition of the possible accidental or intentional unleashing of an infectious agent capable of killing large numbers of humanity led to the bioweapons treaty of 1975 that President Ford signed."

"The treaty prohibits the development of offensive bioweapons however, the one loophole in the treaty is that small quantities of offensive bioweapons are allowed to be developed in order to do research on vaccine countermeasures."

According to Dr. Risch, said loophole was then exploited by the U.S. bioweapons industry, which ultimately led to COVID then the rest of the nightmare known as the "pandemic."

"My hypothesis, what I believe, is that both the virus-origin cover-up and the forced vaccination of the entire planet were orchestrated to protect the integrity of the bioweapons industry," Dr. Risch stated.

"The vaccines then are the evidence that the bioweapons industry was properly justified from the beginning."

The fact that COVID injections were unleashed right in the middle of a so-called "pandemic" is suspect in and of itself because this is not how things are typically done.

If the general public only knew what Dr. Risch and others like him have to say about all this, they would be shocked, angry, and ultimately demanding answers from their elected officials as to how all this could happen right underneath everyone's noses.

"Without a successful vaccine to show for itself in the time of a pandemic crisis, especially one caused by a leak from a bioweapons industry source itself, it would be clear to everyone that the rationale for the industry's existence was a fraud in the first place," Dr. Risch contends.

"And so, the COVID vaccines themselves supplied the defense against the charge that the bioweapons industry was not actually dual-use, but offensive only, violating the 1975 treaty."

Also present at the roundtable was mRNA (modRNA) expert Dr. Robert Malone, as well as data expert Ed Dowd.

"Let us all just pause and remember that the entire scamdemic was indeed one big scam," one commenter made sure to note.
