

The Global Economic Reset Marks The Beginning of The Great Tribulation

Globalists Reveal That the “Great Economic Reset”
Is Coming In 2021 But It Is More Insidious Than That!

Part 1

The Matrix offered everyone a choice, the “red” pill or the “blue” pill. In the movie as narrated, the blue pill will allow the subject to remain in the fabricated reality of the Matrix; the red serves as a "location device" to locate the subject's body in the real world and to prepare him or her to be "unplugged" from the Matrix. Once one chooses the red or blue pill, the choice is irrevocable. The red pill and blue pill is a meme representing a choice between taking either a "red pill" that reveals an unpleasant truth, or taking a "blue pill" to remain in blissful ignorance. The terms are directly derived from a scene in the 1999 film "The Matrix."

For those not familiar with the phrase “global economic reset”, it is one that has been used ever increasingly by elitists in the central banking world for several years. I first heard its use as a specific referenced by Christine Lagarde, the head of the IMF at the time, in 2014. The reset is often mentioned in the same breath as ideas like “the New Multilateralism” or “the Multipolar World Order” or “the New World Order”. All of these phrases mean essentially the same thing – GLOBAL HUMAN ENSLAVEMENT!

The so-called “reset” is being promoted as a solution to the ongoing economic crisis which was triggered in the fall of 2006. You read that date correctly, 2006. It did not begin to be felt until 2008 with the banking crisis which led to the $750-billion bailout that Fed. Chairman Henry (Hank) Paulson held the gun to the heads of Congress threatening the end of the world if Congress failed to bail out the banks to the tune of $750-billion. Today it seems like eternity since then and now with the recent $3-trillion bailout given to the big banks; the man on the street got a puny $1,200 stimulus check. I saw where those who dug into the figures and how the money was disbursed, and if that stimulus plan had been distributed to just the public, it would have been $6,400 per person, every man, woman, and child! So if you think the Trump stimulus bill was a blessing, just remember it was another scam to reward the Rothschild’s banks. I’m not saying the public wasn’t thankful but they got peanuts and the bankers got bonuses of six and seven figures in their pockets. One bank in New Jersey alone, received $5.3-billion.

Even though the loans are guaranteed against losses by the SBA, the Federal Reserve launched its own program, called the Paycheck Protection Program Liquidity Facility, to reimburse lenders who make these loans. So far, the Fed has reimbursed $57 billion of these loans as of June 10th, 2020 out of total loans approved by the SBA of more than $500 billion.

The odd thing about those Fed reimbursements is that a stunning $5.3 billion in reimbursements, or 9% of the $57 reimbursed by the Fed, have gone to a tiny New Jersey bank, Cross River Bank. According to the SBA, as of May 30, there were

5,454 lenders that had made loans in the PPP program. Cross River Bank is just one of those 5,454 lenders and yet it received 9% of the Fed's reimbursements. How does that make any sense?

According to the FDIC, Cross River Bank has only ONE branch office and has been around for just 12 years. The $5.3 billion that the Fed has reimbursed to Cross River Bank is more than twice its total assets of $2.5 billion as of March 30. Cross River Bank has made more than 50% of the dollar amount that Wells Fargo has made in PPP loans but it has only 250 employees rather than the 250,000 employees working for Wells Fargo to review and process these PPP loans.

On December 31, a 'Forbes' magazine investigation revealed The Secret Bank Behind The Fintech Boom.

Cross River Bank is not a typical community bank. There are no tellers here, or ATM's or safe deposit boxes. What did I say? There are startup touches—a kitchenette stocked with LaCroix sparkling water, gourmet coffee and a game room. Seriously folks, you can't make this kind of stuff up! It's widely known on Wall Street.

Unlike in banks of yesteryear, virtually all Cross River's lending officers aren't human beings. They are apps. Cross River's loans originate mostly from 15 or so buzzy venture-capital-backed financial technology startups, so-called fintechs, that go by names like "Affirm," "Best Egg," "Upgrade," "Upstart" and "LendingUSA." The fintechs provide the customers; Cross River provides the licenses and infrastructure. It holds 10% to 20% of each loan it issues, and the massive volume of fintech loans has propelled Cross River to $2 billion in assets, up from $100 million a decade ago.

Once you get beyond the slick iPhone apps and inflated tales of big-data mining and AI-generated lending decisions, you realize that many fintechs are nothing more than aggressive lending outfits for little-known FDIC-insured banks.

'Wall Street on Parade' discusses more Dirty Details. Despite originally promising transparency, U.S. Treasury Secretary Steve Mnuchin (himself, a former Rothschild banker, yet still likely to be a Rothschild agent/handler of the Trump administration as is the case with the Secretary of Commerce, Wilbur Ross) is now stonewalling Congress on releasing a list of the recipients. Wilbur Ross was once the head of Bankruptcy Assets for the Rothschild's and has been Secretary of Commerce since Trump was sworn into office. I believe Wilbur Ross is the longest standing member of the Cabinet.

Congress sold the plan to the public on the basis that the loans would go to small businesses with less than 500 employees. The funds were to be predominantly used to keep workers employed and allow the businesses to survive the coronavirus shutdowns.

Instead, our search of filings at the Securities and Exchange Commission reveals that dozens of debt zombie companies that trade on the Nasdaq got the loans. Dozens of publicly-traded companies with large credit lines from banks got the loans. Dozens of companies with a lot more than 500 employees got the loans. It's beginning to look like tens of billions of dollars in PPP loans were simply funneled out the door rapidly with little oversight into who was getting the loans.

This same financial crash is still with us today; but now, after a decade of central bank money printing and debt creation, the bubble is even bigger than it was before. As always, the central bank "cure" is far worse than the disease, and the renewed crash we face today is far more deadly than what would have happened in 2008 if we had simply taken our medicine and refused to prop up weak parts of the economy artificially.

Basel III is an internationally agreed set of measures developed by the Basel Committee on Banking Supervision in response to the financial crisis of 2007-09. [To be totally accurate, Basel III precipitated the financial crisis through an increase of bank reserves required subsequently]. The BIS raised the reserve requirements of banks, which then led to loan notes being called-in by the banks. It simultaneously meant that a person or business would find it harder to obtain a bank loan for whatever the case might be. The measures were aimed to strengthen the regulation, supervision and risk management of banks.

Many small businesses need to take out a loan from the bank. If your small business needs to take out a loan, make sure it's not a callable loan. Callable loans have an extra amount of risk that you might not be anticipating. They are also known as demand-loans

A callable loan is just like any other loan you can get from a bank with one exception. The bank can "call" the loan and demand full payment of the remainder of the loan immediately. While this practice is legal if disclosed in the terms of the loan, a bank likely will never call the loan unless you fail to meet the loan's terms or worse, the bank needs to raise cash to keep from collapsing and facing insolvency. For example, one or more late payments might trigger a call on the loan. In practice, if you pay your loan payments on time, you probably won't ever have your loan called, but that's up to the bank to decide.

There are two different types of callable loans. The first is called a demand loan. Demand loans are usually one-year lines of credit, but could be longer or shorter. During the term of a loan drawn on this line of credit, the bank can call your loan at any moment.

The other type of callable loan is called a term call option. With this type of callable loan, the bank reviews the loan at predetermined regular intervals. For example, if your loan is 20 years long, the bank might choose to review the loan every four years. During each interval and review process, the bank can call in your loan and demand full payment, but between intervals, the bank can't call your loan. The banks are full of tricks to protect their lending practices.

Like all Basel Committee standards, Basel III standards are minimum requirements which apply to internationally active banks. Members are committed to implementing and applying standards in their jurisdictions within the time frame established by the Committee. Note these dates below, in which some were written nearly a decade in advance so that banks could prepare for what was coming

Finalization of the Basel III post-crisis regulatory reforms:

When I read the small news report, I immediately knew then that a planned global recession was being baked into the cake. Back in 2006 I knew a husband/wife owner of a Hallmark Card shop in nearby Century III mall located in West Mifflin, PA, and they had been hit by a huge (25%) increase in their lease which was coming due for renewal. I shared with them what I knew was coming and they decided not to renew their lease. Their card shop was located on the second level at the central hub location adjacent to escalators and elevators. The Century III shopping complex was in the start of a downhill slide from January of 2007, and subsequently filed bankruptcy in 2019.

The mall was originally built in 1979. The three-level mall contained 1,290,000 square feet (120,000 meters.) of retail space and over 200 shops and restaurants. The Phase I segment of seventy-five stores was dedicated on October 24, 1979. This included three anchor stores; a 2-level 121,300 square foot, Pittsburgh-based Kaufmann's, and 2-level 173,200 square-foot JC Penney; and a huge Sear's. The facility closed in 2019, its new owner a national real estate owner of shopping malls around the country filed for bankruptcy to block a sheriff's sale in 2019.

This story has been repeated many times over the past fifteen years around the U.S. as the Basel III Accords settled in across the country. Strip malls, enclosed malls, across the country have slowly become squeezed out of existence, and even those that have survived have vacancy levels as much as 70%. Shopping mall operators like to keep vacancy levels around 10% and preferably not more than 20% so as to not discourage attracting new retail tenants. So what we see happening is part of a plan to slowly squeeze the retail sector of the economy in the U.S. as well as other countries.

Over the past five years we have seen approximately 47,000 stores across the country close their doors forever! On Tuesday, June 23, 2020, GNC Holdings Inc., GNC, filed for bankruptcy late Tuesday, as it expects to accelerate its plan to close at least 800 to 1,200 of its stores. The stock has been halted for news since late Tuesday. The vitamin and wellness supplements retailer, with about 7,300 company and franchise stores as of March 31, said its stores will remain open, as the company has secured $130 million in liquidity, including $100 million in debtor-in-possession financing and $30 million from modifications to an existing credit facility. GNC, a majority of its secured lenders and Harbin Pharmaceutical Group Holding Co. Ltd., an affiliate of GNC's largest shareholder, have reached an agreement in principle for the sale of the company's business for $760 million, which would be executed through a court-supervised auction.

Many economists wrongly attribute the Federal Reserve System habit of making things worse to “hubris” or “ignorance”. They think the Fed actually wants to save the financial system or “protect the golden goose”, but this is not reality. The truth is the Fed is not a bumbling maintenance man, the Fed is a saboteur, a suicide bomber that is willing to destroy even itself as an institution in order to explode the U.S. economy and clear the path for a new globally centralized one-world system. Hence, you get the “Global Reset”. I have monitored a business site that reports on bank closings, business closings, bankruptcies, layoffs and hiring's.

Today, malls across the U.S. are dying. No new enclosed mall has been built since 2006, and real estate sources predict fully half of all our malls will close in the next 10 years. Surprisingly, it is not due to Walmart's, Costco's, or Amazon. The Internet gets blamed but e-commerce sales fail to make a dent of 10%, yet that 10% can be a significant hurt when mall owners raise rents by as much as 30%.

The global reset is not a “response” to the process of collapse we are trapped in today. The global reset was implemented by central banks and the BIS/IMF and is the cause of the collapse. The collapse is merely an instrument; a flamethrower burning a great hole in the forest to make way for the foundations of the globalist Ziggurat to be built....economic disaster serves the interests of elitists. It has been a deliberate intentional take-down of the economic sector of the U.S. The U.S. economy was retail driven and constituted to be 75% of the nation's economic sector CPI.

Now in 2020 we see the globalist plan coming to fruition, with the elites revealing what appears to be their intent to launch their reset in 2021. The World Economic Forum officially announced the Great Reset initiative as part of their Covid Action Platform last week, and a summit is scheduled in January 2021 to discuss their plans more openly with the world and the mainstream media.

The WEF also posted a rather bizarre video on the Reset, which consists of a series of images of the world falling apart (and images of factories releasing harmless carbon emission into the air which I suppose is meant to scare us with notions of global warming). The destruction is then “reset” at the push of a button, with everything reversing back to a pristine human-less world of nature and the words “Join Us”.

The reset, according to discussions by the IMF, is basically the next stage in the formation of a one-world economic system and potential global government. This seems to fall in line with the solutions offered during the Event 201 pandemic simulation; a simulation of a coronavirus pandemic that was held by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation and the World Economic Forum only two months before the REAL THING happened at the beginning of 2020. Event 201 suggested that one of the top solutions to a pandemic would be the institution of a centralized global economic body that could handle the financial response to the coronavirus.

Isn't that convenient that the events of the real coronavirus pandemic fall exactly in line with the Event 201 simulation, as well as directly in line with the global reset plans of the IMF and the World Economic Forum? As they say, let no crisis go to waste, or, as is the motto of the Masonic globalists "Order Out Of Chaos".

With civil unrest about to become a way of life for many parts of the world including the U.S., and the pandemic set for a resurgence of infections after the "reopening", creating a rationale for a second wave of lockdowns probably in July, the economy as we know it is being destroyed. The last vestiges of the system, hanging by a thin thread after the crash of 2008, are now being cut. There have been warnings issued that the national electrical grid may be brought down this summer as part of this crashing the system.

The goal is rather obvious – terrify the population with poverty, internal conflicts and a broken supply chain until they lobby the establishment for help. Then, offer the "solution" of medical tyranny, immunity passports, martial law, a global economic system based on a cashless digital society in which privacy in trade is erased, and then slowly but surely form a faceless "multilateral" global government which answers to no one and does whatever it pleases.

This is precisely what the Bible warned those who have eyes to see and ears to hear is all about. Those who know their Bible well enough know what to expect in this Satanic attack on the world. The prelude that we are in now is but the lead up to the Great Tribulation referred to in the Bible.

I remember back in 2014 when Christine Lagarde first began talking about the reset. That same year she also made a very strange speech to the National Press Club in which she started rambling gleefully about numerology and the "magic number 7". Many within the club laughed, as there was apparently an inside joke that the rest of us were not privy to. Well, I would point out that the World Economic Forum meeting on the global reset in 2021 will be held exactly 7 years after Lagarde gave that speech. Just another interesting coincidence I suppose... We know the occult world do things by the numbers or numerology.

The new world order, the global reset, is a long running scheme to "centralize power," but in a way that is meant to be sustained for centuries to come. The elites know that it is not enough to achieve global governance by force alone; such an attempt would only lead to resistance and eternal rebellion. No, what the elites want is for the public to ASK, even beg for global governance. If the public is tricked into demanding it as a way to save them from the horrors of global chaos, then they are far less likely to rebel against it later. Problem – reaction – solution! The Hegelian Dialectic has worked for a couple hundred years and they are predictable in every way known in the use of the “Thesis – Antithesis – Synthesis” formula. The Hegelian Dialectic works and so they stay with the game plan that has been successful for nearly two centuries.

Hegel’s dialectic is the tool which manipulates us into a frenzied circular pattern of thought and action. Every time we fight for or defend against an ideology we are playing a necessary role in the elite’s game and it holds this system in place, and opting out our consciousness is the key.

The chess board is a well-known Masonic or Hegelian symbol; the black and white squares symbolize control through duality in the grand game of life in all aspects. Left or right, white or black people, conservative or liberal, democrat or republican, Christian or Muslim and so on. Through two opposing parties control is gained as both parties reach the same destination, which is order through guided conflict or chaos.

The pandemic is not going away anytime soon. Everyone should expect that state governments and the federal government will call for renewed lockdowns. With these new lockdowns, the US economy in particular will be finished. With 46 million people losing their jobs during the last lockdowns (46.5 million as of today), many states only partially reopened, and only 13% to 18% of small businesses receiving bailout loans to survive, the next two months are going to be a devastating wake-up call. The hoped for “V” economic recovery is a pipe dream. 60% of small businesses will close their doors forever.

The real solution will be for people to form more self-reliant local communities free of the mainstream economy. The real solution should be decentralization and independence, not centralization and slavery. The globalists will seek to interfere with any effort to break from the program. That said, they can do very little if millions of people enact localization efforts at the same time. If people aren't reliant on the system, then they cannot be controlled by the system.

The real test will come with the final collapse of the existing economy. When stagflation spikes even harder than it is right now and prices of necessities double or triple yet again, and joblessness skyrockets even further, how many people will clamor for the globalist solution and how many will build their own systems? How many will be bowing in submission and how many will be ready to fight back.

What I suspect is that many people will fight back, but nowhere the needed numbers to resist. Not as many as we might hope for, but enough to defend the cause of liberty. The New World Order will overcome the opposition that will ensue around the world. There will be civil war and unrest around the world as they control all the tools of the victors; i.e., communications, military, technology, media, all the key networks.

David Haggith offered his analysis that lies before us and it is a realistic forecast and unfolding of the social collapse that will ensue. It is comprehensive enough to present what is a realistic projection.

“The troubles listed here in my 2020 economic predictions are so severe and so likely to get even worse that it's more difficult to imagine they won't get worse than to believe they will. Just a few of these misfortunes would be enough to plunge us into an abyss of social and financial catastrophes.”

Here are my economic predictions for the remainder of 2020

“This list of economic predictions is not hard to come up with. It is, however, the fact that it is so easy to predict these things this year that makes this year's list so important.

I think most readers will agree with the likelihood of most predictions on this list. The point of the list, then, is to show by the aggregate of calamities that will wash over us how close to certain is a deep economic depression. (Most are problems central banks have zero capacity to resolve.)

This depression is something many people may not perceive until they widen their field of vision to see the full ocean of likely troubles that are nearly certain to pound the entire world in wave after wave for months or even years to come.

(Though I focus on the US, the same economics predictions are likely to apply all over the world with their own variations of local color.)

Many people are living right now in the delusional hope of a V-shaped recovery from the recent Corona-crisis lockdown. The list below shows why that is the most unlikely possibility imaginable.

During this time of economic crisis, most of the predictions listed below are current events that are almost certain to continue as the major trends of 2020 and are likely to even worsen, plunging us into the chaos of a deep economic collapse, worse than 2008:

For those not familiar with the phrase “global economic reset”, it is one that has been used ever increasingly by elitists in the central banking world for several years. I first heard it referenced by Christine Lagarde, the head of the IMF at the time, in 2014. As always, the central bank “cure” is far worse than the disease, and the renewed crash we face today is far more deadly than what would have happened in 2008 if we had simply taken our medicine and refused to prop up weak parts of the economy artificially.

The story began in the summer of 2006; I read a small business page article in a financial paper in which a major Charlotte, NC bank pulled their support for a merger between two well-known companies. I remember the small article but have forgotten the specifics such as the bank’s name, and the two companies. I had been following the Bank of International Settlements (BIS) for twenty-five years and it had only been a few weeks prior to reading the news report, that the BIS had announced Basel III Accords. The Basel III reforms have now been integrated into the consolidated Basel Framework, which comprises all of the current and forthcoming standards of the Basel Committee on Banking Supervision. For background, set out below are the main publications that describe the changes to the Basel Framework that were agreed as part of Basel III.

Basel III is an internationally agreed set of measures developed by the Basel Committee on Banking Supervision in response to the financial crisis of 2007-09. I think most readers will agree with the likelihood of most predictions on this list. The point of the list, then, is to show by the aggregate of calamities that will wash over us how close to certain is a deep economic depression. (Most are problems central banks have zero capacity to resolve.)

This depression is something many people may not perceive until they widen their field of vision to see the full ocean of likely troubles that are nearly certain to pound the entire world in wave after wave for months or even years to come.

(Though I focus on the US, the same economics predictions are likely to apply all over the world with their own variations of local color.)

Many people are living right now in the delusional hope of a V-shaped recovery from the recent Corona-crisis lockdown. The list below shows why that is the most unlikely possibility imaginable.

During this time of economic crisis, most of the predictions listed below are current events that are almost certain to continue as the major trends of 2020 and are likely to even worsen, plunging us into the chaos of a deep economic collapse, worse than 2008:

- The social unrest of BLM will become even more widespread and intense.
- Additional social unrest over forced social distancing will reappear around the nation as distancing measures return.
- Social unrest over corporate bailouts is likely to begin as the Federal Reserve and government stack up mega bailouts for the rich (or as bailouts already given become known) via the insanely rich BlackRock, which has been given a monopoly on administering handouts for which only the wealthiest qualify.*
- Tearing down of monuments and other acts of violence will certainly create backlash against BLM from those who value the monuments or just want the history of both sides preserved.*
- *So, social unrest will beget more social unrest.
- All the turmoil of a likely-to-be contested election with all the accusations of Russian tampering and other hacking (like what just happened to Trump's Tulsa rally) will cause even more social unrest.*
- All those social conflicts will negatively impact some local businesses already hurting badly from the COVID-19 lockdown because they will be unable to reopen due to the protests at a time when we cannot afford anything that causes further damage to business.*
- Social distancing being ignored entirely by BLM protestors, will increase the spread of COVID-19 as will reopening, ending the stock market's fantasy of a V-shaped recovery. (Even if the Coronacrisis is a trumped-up hoax as some say, the same scenario will give the hoax all kinds of new (and news) stories to grow on.)
- Travel and hospitality will certainly remain in deep depression as COVID-19 stages resurgences.*
- Lack of travel assures a continued rise in bankruptcies in the oil and gas industry.
- Shutdowns of major summer events will depress local business and government revenue as will shutdowns of sports events and concerts.

- Local governments will be forced to downsize staffing quickly and cut back projects of all kinds due to hugely diminished tax revenue caused by all the troubles listed here, causing a new wave of job losses, not just in government but in companies that contract for government projects.
- Diminished policing will result in a huge crime wave across America. Some of that will result from police department defunding; some will be required in other ways by liberal governments seeking to placate protestors; and a lot will happen because police officers resign and no new people want to become police in the present atmosphere. This will be as damaging to Black communities as to White and will have a suppressive effect on economic activity.
- Business uncertainty due to the continuing trade wars and to additional COVID-19 border lockdowns, as well as inability of businesses to get parts across borders even for products produced and sold within the nation, will act like gravity on the hope of economic lift. (What a time to be doubling down on trade wars, but here we go already!)
- We all know the federal debt will keep growing at an exponential rate because of reduced taxes that were supposed to be paid for by a rise to 4% or better GDP growth. That's now a distant dream when the best we will see is - 10% GDP growth. Compounding the retreat in GDP and the resulting drop in tax revenues, we have increased government spending due to COVID-19 stimulus efforts. All of that will require the Federal Reserve to monetize the debt to the moon and back. At some point that will call into question the current US credit rating.
- So many bonds sliding toward junk because the weak business economy will force all kinds of already risky credit to become riskier and become downgraded.
- Forced offloading of that debt by institutions that are not allowed to carry junk bonds, will cause huge bond market problems and defaults by those who can no longer refinance by issuing new bonds. That will force the Fed to continue to soak up ever larger amounts of junkier debt, moving further down the junk spectrum, even as it also has to fund the federal government's exploding debt plus the new exploding debts of local governments via new "special vehicles."
- The stock market, being utterly dependent on the Fed continuing to print money while also utterly dependent on COVID-19 keeping its head down, will go down hard again, likely this summer and probably again in the fourth quarter. I predict it will ultimately fall lower than its nadir in March.
- That will cause more wealth evaporation, leading to more natural economic tightening across the financial and business spectrum.
- The second wave of COVID-19 will be worse than the first when the fall flu season hits or maybe even this summer, given that the hottest rise in cases is happening in our hottest states. That makes it obvious that climate temperature does nothing to slow the spread.
- Some major banks and other financial institutions in Europe, such as Deutsche Bank, and in other nations will crash. US institutions will get pulled down by their associations.

- Many businesses will never reopen even though the economy has been reopened legally. Many others that do re-open will close for good before long because partial reopening is not enough to sustain them and, in some cases, may even cause them to lose more money than if they stayed closed. (Already, as I predicted prior to the opening would happen all across America, I see restaurants in my own area that did not reopen, and I've talked to people in restaurants that did reopen who say they are not even able to fill their reduced 50% capacity under social distancing rules because they can't get enough customers to return. Restaurants are slim-margin business, so many will fail.) And that is even if the Coronacrisis doesn't have a resurgence.
- More shopping malls that were already marginal will close forever after reopening because of the number of businesses that do not return or that fail during the partial reopening.
- That, in turn, will have a knock-on effect for other surrounding businesses that now experience less traffic.
- Due to the continuing sweep of all the problems listed above, we are in for a deep, long-term jobs depression.
- That means housing and commercial real-estate will crash again as long-term unemployment and business losses result in mortgage defaults.
- The resulting deep slowdown in construction will mean even more job losses.
- That means some US banks will crash (or have to be bailed out by the Fed) (though maybe not until 2021) due to all the loan problems caused by all of the above, resulting in even more job losses.
- Add to all of these near certainties, the growing possibilities of more international wars that we already see rising in risk — North Korea v. South Korea, North Korea v. the US, Israel v. Iran, Israel v. the Palestinians over annexation of parts of the West Bank, Saudi Arabia v. Yemen, China v. Taiwan, China v. Nepal, China v. the US, India v. Pakistan. Many of these conflicts seem to have intensified over the past year, and that's just a short list of currently rising or continuing international conflicts.
- Civil wars within various nations are more likely because of the rising economic troubles and social strife listed here as well as continued growing strife due to immigration pressures that developed under globalization.
- I won't predict the US dollar will collapse, BUT ... this is the FIRST year in which I've ever said that is a reasonable possibility. Until now, it lay dimly in the future. Nations are angry over how the dollar has been repeatedly weaponized by the US via sanctions. So, I am certain the indomitable dollar will finally start to experience struggles of its own due to all the problems listed here, which will result in the Federal Reserve being less able to manage the financial chaos nationally and internationally, and due to competition from new central bank digital currencies this year, maybe, but especially next.
- Add to all of that the normal economic crises from major exogenous events, such as earthquakes, volcanism, hurricanes, tornadoes, floods, droughts, pestilence, wildfires, and, oh, an asteroid or two. The difference this year is that those big catastrophes will be hitting badly crippled economies and stressed societies wherever they hit in this world. (We cannot know what will hit or whether the number of such events will be lighter or heavier than other years because these are black-swan events — things we know CAN happen but have no knowledge of the specific likelihood of any particular event in a particular area in any given year. What we do know is that nations struggling under an economic crisis and an emergency health crisis will be less able to manage those events when they hit. Organizations like FEMA will be stretched way beyond their capacities.)

Above – Jacob Rothschild, private major owner of the Bank for International Settlements in Basel, Switzerland. The headquarters resembles the Tower of Babel from the Bible.

That's a long list of finger-in-the-wind economic predictions. I'm not saying all of them will be dominant trends this year, and I can't say when or in what order each one will happen; but I am certain 80% or more of my 2020 economic predictions will play out as stated above, and that is more than enough to assure the deep economic depression I've named "The Epocalyse."

None of the above points remain apart or isolated from the larger scope of what lies before the world at the mid-point of 2020. The fact is this has come about as accidental. As I noted at the beginning this all began in early fall of 2006, with the BIS declaration of the Basel III Accords. I'm sure that there are charts confirming what I have been stating, but I knew back in 2006, what the future held.

One of the immediate visible manifestations of the "Great Reset" that will impact people around the world will be the "Cashless Society". If you doubt that currencies are going to survive beyond this year, you need to go back and read the list of predictions shared above again. The banks have been working on this plan to do away with cash going back to 1960, according to an old Army buddy of mine who was a bank branch manager. The American Banking Association stated their goal was to eliminate cash as a means of buying and selling.

Most people think of New York City or London, England as the center of finance, but the real power is located in Basel, Switzerland. The BIS is the most obscure arm of the Bretton-Woods International Financial architecture but its role is central. John Maynard Keynes wanted it closed down as it was used to launder money for the Nazis in World War II. Run by an inner elite representing the world's major central banks it controls most of the transferable money in the world. It uses that money to draw national governments into debt for the IMF.

Carroll Quigley, author of 'Tragedy and Hope' published in 1966, was mentor for President Clinton at Georgetown University, and wrote this about the BIS: Carroll Quigley was the archivist for the Illuminati for two year, and this book laid out what is now coming to full fruition.

"The Power of financial capitalism had [a] far reaching plan, nothing less than to create a world system of financial control in private hands able to dominate the political system of each country and the economy of the world as a whole.

This system was to be controlled in a feudalistic fashion by the central banks of the world acting in concert, by secret agreements arrived at in frequent meetings and conferences.

The apex of the system was to be the Bank for International Settlements in Basel, Switzerland, a private bank owned and controlled by the world's central banks, which were themselves private corporations.

Each central bank sought to dominate its government by its ability to control treasury loans, to manipulate foreign exchanges, to influence the level of economic activity in the country, and to influence co-operative politicians by subsequent rewards in the business world."

A further examination of both graph and list of bankers' names reveals that, of the banking organizations, the Banks for International Settlements (or BIS from now on) is self-evidently of prime importance on the international scene - not only because of its prestigious membership (embracing as it does the head bankers of the leading industrial nations) - but also because of the significance of its links with other groups. This article will focus on it, at the expense of the other better-known banking institutions, for two reasons: (1) its prime ranking in the international hierarchy; and (2) so little knowledge of it is in the public domain.

The BIS is the world's oldest international financial institution, having been set up in 1930 with the twin aim of (1) coping with reparations/loans from/to a very unstable post-World War one Germany; and (2) more importantly, to act as a forum for central bankers in the future. As such, it was the epitome of supranationality - able to circumvent all those orthodox ideals that had, over the years, become synonymous with the concept of the 'nation state' - such as 'love of country', 'patriotism' etc., - the danger, of course, being that, in certain circumstances (such as a state of war), such circumvention of patriotism by any of its board members could lead to them being accused of treasonable offences.

By the late 1930's the BIS had assumed an openly pro-Nazi bias - much of it disclosed by Charles Higham in his book 'Trading With the Enemy', and years later corroborated by a BBC Timewatch film "Banking With Hitler" (broadcast in late 1998). Two examples of such bias (there were many more) were: (1) The BIS had arranged transfers into the account of the German's Reichbank of $378 million of what was, in effect, gold looted from the coffers of the invaded countries of Austria, Czechoslovakia, Holland and Belgium; and (2) in the summer of 1942, plans for the projected American invasion of Algeria were leaked to the governor of the French National Bank, who immediately contacted his German colleague in the BIS, SS Gruppenfuehrer Baron Kurt von Schroder (of the Stein Bank of Cologne), and by transferring 9 billion gold francs to Algiers - via the BIS - the Germans and their French subsidiaries made a killing of some $175 million in this dollar-exchange scam. Given the membership of the BIS at that time, this was hardly surprising. On the board were the following high-profile representatives of the Axis powers (there were 4 others): Walther Funk (Pres. of the Reichbank); Kurt von Schroder (above); Dr. Hermann Schmitz (Jt.Chm. of I.G.Farben); Emil Puhl (V/Pres. of the Reichbank); Yoneji Yamamoto; and Dr. V. Azzolini (Gov. Bank of Italy). It should be added that, of the non-Axis members on the board, many - such as Montagu Norman (Gov. of the Bank of England) were Nazi sympathizers, and that the President of the BIS from 1939 to 1946 was Thomas McKittrick, an American corporate lawyer who had been both Director of Lee, Higginson & Co. (a company which had made substantial loans to the Third Reich) and Chairman of the British-American Chamber of Commerce in London. His continued presidency of the BIS after America's entry into the war in December 1941 was approved by Germany and Italy with this significant addendum to their note of authorization: "McKittrick's opinions are safely known to us".

In the late 1930's, and more particularly during World War 2, given America's great wealth - as opposed to Europe's straitened circumstances - it was inevitable that the trade between the two would be of a one-way nature, from the former to the latter. And not surprisingly, in view of the close relationship between American and German corporations (as noted above), a substantial portion of supplies went to Germany - often via fascist Spain - by ship and tanker under flags of neutrality. Many of the financial arrangements covering such trade were handled by BIS in neutral Basle. As an example of how substantial this trade was: in mid-'44 America was supplying Germany with 48 thousand tons of oil, and 11 hundred tons of much-needed wolfram (tungsten) per month! The fact that this trade was illegal in the USA for much of this period - and particularly after America's entry into the war in December 1941 - did little to stop such trade. The large corporations, such as Standard Oil and ITT, saw to that. After all, then - as now - the US Administration was effectively under corporate control (as it has been since 1933, during FDR's term of office). Even the Secretary of Treasury, Henry Morgenthau, and his Assistant, Harry Dexter White, aware as they well were of the part played by BIS in this, could do little about it. In July '44, 730 delegates from 44 countries met at Bretton Woods to plan a framework for post-war international trade, payments and investments - a conference which subsequently resulted in the setting up in 1947 of both the International Bank for Reconstruction & Development (IBRD, or World Bank) and the International Monetary Fund (IMF). The apparent inviolability of the BIS referred to above was perhaps best illustrated by the fact that Resolution 5, calling for the dissolution of BIS, was subsequently ignored and proven ineffective. The corporate establishment had seen to that - as indeed, it had seen to all such previous attempts.

With war's end now calling for a clearing of conscience, BIS's method of achieving this was by stressing its somewhat euphemistic neutrality, while playing down its less palatable, but quintessential supranationality. Their annual report of 1946 - as quoted in the 'Times' - stated: "It is noted that the Bank has continued to supply the principles of strict neutrality, but that circumstances have caused a further decline in the volume of its business". Further: "Wars are the worst cause of monetary convulsions, and the first condition for enjoying the benefits of an ordinary monetary system is to establish and maintain a reign of peace". In view of their recent previous history, the term 'irony' hardly does justice to the above statements!. This report was, incidentally, the last to be signed by its President, Thomas McKittrick: in June 1946 he was appointed Vice/Chairman of the Chase National Bank by its owners, the Rockefellers - presumably as a mark of gratitude for the assistance rendered to them by the BIS during his presidency.

In view of the somewhat puzzling fact that this now meant that there were in this post-war period three international financial/banking institutions - all with the self-evidently similar aim of resolving the world's serious economic problems - a brief, close look is called for in order to clarify the situation. The first (and intriguing) fact to be noted here is that, whereas the IMF and The World Bank have been frequently and conspicuously in the public eye from birth, the BIS has adopted a low profile and remained uncommunicative. This was an expedient tactic for the latter to adopt - for two reasons: (1) it thus eluded any investigation into its previous financial dealings with the Third Reich; and (2) more importantly, by so dissociating itself from the IMF and World Bank, the latter would henceforth be widely (though erroneously) regarded as the sole guardians of the worldwide economy, thus allowing the BIS more latitude to follow the agenda set by the corporate establishment - to whom, it must be recalled, they owed their survival.

This ambivalent relationship between the IMF/World Bank vis-a-vis the BIS/commercial banks in the 1970's is epitomized by Anthony Sampson in his book 'The Money Lenders': "The commercial banks in the meantime had created a very different perspective, for the IMF now controlled much less of the world's money. In 1966, the quotas which made up its capital amounted to 10% of the total world imports; but by '76 they made up only 4%"... "by 1976 world annual deficits had reached $75 billion : of this, 7% financed by the IMF; 18% by other official international bodies (governments and World Bank) - remaining three-quarters financed by banks (commercial)". (Today, some two-and-a-half decades later, the board members of BIS, between them, control 95% of the money in circulation). The reason for this apparent taking over of such responsibility by the BIS from the IMF/World Bank is twofold: (1) the collapse of the Bretton Woods system of exchange convertibility in the early seventies exposed the irrelevance of the latter as agents for European reconstruction; and (2) the latter being statutorily-appointed agents of the UN, were therefore - ostensibly - accountable to a much wider constituency than the BIS; and, therefore politically less manageable by the corporate establishment, whose primary aim in the aftermath of World War 2 was to ensure the unrestricted flow of American capital into Europe. A flow considerably eased by subsequent European integration, in which both NATO and the Bilderberg played a crucial role. This aim was furthered by means of the US Congressionally-authorized European Cooperation Act (ECA) of 1948, and implemented by its subsidiary, the European Payments Union (EPU) of 1950 - both under the aegis of the Marshall Plan of 1947.

Predictably, the BIS was the institution chosen by the EPU to oversee this movement of capital (a point worthy of note here is that the head of the EPU at that time was one Richard Bissell, an economist who, years later, was to be the CIA Deputy Director of Planning overseeing the Bay of Pigs fiasco in April 1961!). The BIS was now firmly ensconced in the heart of European integration, and was subsequently to play a critical role in the events leading to its (Europe's) eventual involvement into the European Union, a bureaucratic politico-economic body occupying a position of crucial importance within the wider global hierarchy envisaged by the corporate establishment. The U.S. did not formally become a member of the BIS until 1994.

The significance of the American's key central role in this sequence of events is underscored by the fact that, in the aftermath of World War 2, they (the Americans) set up the Bundesbank in Frankfurt (in their zone of control), ensuring that the bank would be independent of government and follow a strict monetary policy - in effect, another Federal Reserve System. In 1948 they replaced the existing Reichmarks with approximately 11 billion Deutschmarks, and Germany's subsequent conduct vis-a-vis European integration must be viewed with this in mind. In any case, the fact remains that Germany's subsequent frequent delaying tactics enabled the dollar to consolidate its dominance.

In their published précis entitled "Profile of an International Organization", the BIS states that its "predominant tasks are summed up most succinctly in part of Article 3 of its original Statutes. They are 'to promote the co-operation of central banks and to provide additional facilities for international financial operations'". To achieve this aim it has 3 administrative bodies: (1) a Board of Directors, comprising the Governors of the central banks of Belgium, France, Germany, Italy, the UK and the USA, each of whom appoints another member of the same nationality - plus the central bank Governors of Canada, Japan, Holland, Sweden and Switzerland: a total of 17. (2) A Management Board; and (3) An annual General Meeting in June of each year.

That this is an organization carrying enormous clout is readily confirmed by a closer look at said synopsis, but this is such a major story that it requires a great deal of information that few would be interested in or care to read. Suffice it to say, the House of Rothschild controls the international money markets and credit availability to the nations of the world. They in essence, through the BIS and Rothschild-owned central banks, determine who gets access to borrowing and at what rate of interest.

Since September 1994, the eleven countries from which the members of the Bank's Board of Directors are drawn have been identical with the countries which comprise the Group of Ten (G-10), with which the BIS has had a long and close association.

As well as making resources available to the IMF under the GAB (General Arrangements to Borrow) the G-10 has, since 1963, been a principal forum for discussion of international monetary questions. From the outset, the BIS have been a participant in G-10 Meetings, above all because the Governors of the G-10 central banks meet regularly on the occasion of the Basle (Basel) monthly meetings. The G-10 meetings have, over time, become the pivotal forum in which much wider activities have been set in motion by the G-10 central banks in the pursuit of financial stability.

The seat of first world finance capital is Basel, Switzerland, where the Central Banks of the Group of Seven (G-7) form the directorate of the Bank for International Settlements (BIS). The G-7 includes Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Canada, the U.S., and Japan. The G-7 is called the "Hard Currency Countries" because their Central banks, corporations privately owned by the Prime Banks of these nations, have acquired most of the mined, milled, and ingoted gold of the world. Approximately 80 percent of this is in the vaults of Credit Suisse, under the Berghoff, the airport in Zurich. A somewhat larger formation, called the G-10, includes Belgium, Holland, and Sweden.

The U.S. has become the greatest debtor nation on earth because the Prime Banks of the other nations of the G-10 (especially Britain, Holland, and Japan) have purchased the U.S. government debt in the form of semi-annual and tax-exempt U.S. Treasury Securities through the operations of the Federal Open Market Committee, the Fed's window on Wall Street.

Of these U.S. Treasury Securities, 95% have been floated since the end of World War II to finance the Cold War against the "Evil Empire." Now Communism has been deflated as an enemy; nativist fascist movements are being pumped up all around the globe and the aggregate Debt is approaching the net worth of all the real estate and movables on the planet. Now, also, the U.S. and Russia are joining their military and space programs, the U.S. is becoming by degrees a full-blown totalitarian state, and the bankers are beginning to foreclose upon the bankrupted minions and dupes within their new global condominium. This is what the world is told but you would not know it by the rhetoric between President Trump and Prime Minister Putin.

The Bank for International Settlements (BIS), the "first beast", was founded in 1930 and was the first entity to be called a "World Bank." Monetarist and gold-based, it functions as a clearing house for the balance of payments between nations. It operated throughout WWII as an interlocking directorate and a clearinghouse for joint Allied and Axis high finance.

The World Bank/International Monetary Fund (IMF), the "Second Beast," was founded in 1946, after being drafted at Bretton Woods, New Hampshire, during the war in 1944. The IMF functions as the collection agency for the World Bank, much as the IRS functions as the collection agency for the Federal Reserve Bank. The Wall Street branch of the Federal Reserve is the "fiscal agent" for the IMF in the USA. The capital pool of the IMF consists of the Prime Banks of the First World, which interlock with the First World (G-7) military-industrial complexes and the oil conglomerates.

The IMF functions under the aegis of the United Nations, as a Keynesian paper credit-mill, extending credit in the form of Special Drawing Rights (SDRs) to the Second and Third World debtor nations, requiring that they purchase specified amounts of the currency of the G-7 nations, imposing "austerity terms" upon their internal economies, and looting them by means of "repayment schedules" of their natural resources and minerals. These are channeled through the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) to the multinational cartels, also headquartered in Geneva, Switzerland.

With the implementation of NAFTA and the Uruguay Round of GATT, the real wages of blue and white collar workers in the U.S. will be leveled in time to near parity with the Third World. The last "Superpower," the United States, is not the primary head of the G-7 Beast, but is, owing to its debtor status, the last head, appropriately close to the horned tail, engaging disproportionately in UN Security Council "police actions" around the globe.

International Capital, having gone "global," will increasingly employ the blue-helmeted troops of the UN to enforce the hegemony of Capital in the future. Now, in 2020, we are advancing to what has been in the works since before I was born.

The House of Rothschild is not about to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs. They have had a monopoly on creating money out of nothing and loaning it out to nations, and charging interest in the process at rates of 6-24%. The trick in their game is such that in the event of a default, they repo or claim title to real assets, be it a vehicle, a trucking company, a cruise ship, a public utility, or a nation's natural resources. Now in the case of the USA, every one of us is pledged collateral on that debt to the House of Rothschild. That is accomplished through bundling birth certificates and selling them on the stock market.

This will help you understand why the budgets of President Trump have been so large and so cavalier in the government's spending on the public credit card. If you know bankruptcy is just around the corner, you max out your credit cards! With President Trump and his "Making America Great Again" cliché, financial prudence was never part of the plan or concern on the national debt, which is at $26+ trillion dollars and growing!

Italy: New Guidelines For Central Bank Digital Currency

Central banks around the world are examining the use of digital currencies.

As of recent, central banks of the U.K., Sweden, Thailand, China, and the US are studying whether there are advantages of the digital form of their fiat money.

And the answer is yes, the government and banking elites will seize even more power from the people.

Called central bank digital currencies (CBDCs), this “digital fiat” — digital money can be directly sent to people’s bank accounts. It eliminates physical cash – which is the end game for banking elites.

A CBDC gives a government complete control over its currency. This will increase their financial-surveillance over the people. When a bank fails, there will be no bank run, because people can’t withdraw their money from that bank. This means when a financial crisis strikes, it will allow governments to do “bail-ins” where the people, like it or not, will be forced to take a haircut on their deposits to save the failing institution.

Opinion: The key word for 2020 is control

- Covid-19 pandemic quarantined over 3,000,000,000 people
- Covid-19 pandemic has the population still wearing masks 4 months later
- Covid-19 pandemic is causing tens of millions to be tested for the virus
- Covid-19 pandemic slammed the brakes on the global economy
- Covid-19 made the global population dependent on printed money (QE) from central banks

Now that’s a whole lot of control, yet it’s only the beginning. Society faces three economic events that will lead to the complete control of the global economy.

The first event is hyperinflation -(Revelation 6:5-6) that puts the common man in frightening conditions. Runaway inflation causes desperation, as kitchen cupboards become empty and even when food is available, the price is too high for the average family. We see that in Cuba and Venezuela today as a result of price controls and Communist governments. The government elite, and the 1% elite, are completely unaffected because of their vast wealth, and they continue to live in luxury.

The second event is very different. As Antichrist takes control of the west, the ability to buy and sell -(Revelation 13:16-17) becomes controlled by the government. A mark on the right hand or forehead will identify all those who have pledged their loyalty to the all-powerful global government and its very powerful leader, Prince Charles of Wales. Since the church is not on earth at this point, it is likely that the 1% will lead the way in receiving the mark, to gain favor with the government.

The third event is the economic toll that will be felt as a result of 46-million unemployed, in June, 2020, 30% of rent and mortgage payments went unpaid. The New World Order elite have stated that 10 million jobs will be replaced with AI and robotics in the next five years.

It all starts with a cashless society and it is coming at warp speed. Think about how infrequently you use cash today. In a cashless society, everyone will lose real wealth, How so, you may ask? Central control will eliminate free market competition and pricing that comes with a free market society. Your compensation will earn computer digits equivalent to what the central banks will determine you should receive.

A worker in the U.S. will receive the same wages as the peasant in Vietnam, or Cambodia, or Bangkok, or Brazil. He will be unable to strike or go elsewhere to find work at a better wage. This is your future destiny in the Great Reset!

Blessings,
